JOHN M. He is a man of great wealth and influence among both the white and colored people of the state. For several years he was professor of law in Howard University and was made dean of the law department, and for two years was vice president and acting president of that institution. He has been the attorney of the District of Columbia, and in 1877 was appointed minister to Hayti.

THE THIRD PARTY.

The calling of the prohibition county convention naturally suggests some words as to the ends and aims of the third party. The existence of this party seems an anomaly in politics. That those people who desire prohibition should associate themselves together to obtain it is no doubt natural. But how are they to obtain it? On the answer to this question depends the justification of the third party. The only possible way recognized by the constitution is by the consent of the majority of the voters. As long as the prohibitionists are in the minority, prohibition remains impracticable. Consequently, it is the obvious duty of all who wish prohibition to endeavor to convert the majority to their views. This being the case, a party organization appears wholly unnecessary. What effect it can have on the enlightenment of the masses in regard to the evils of liquor selling is impossible to see. The candidates nominated by the convention are sure to be overwhelmingly defeated. How can their defeat help the temperance cause, or incline the wavering voter towards the prohibitory amendment?

To most people the effect will be just the reverse of what the prohibitionists desire. Those who yearn for prohibition are sure to be discouraged when they perceive how small a following they have. They will not want to be ranked with a hopeless minority. They will in sheer despair altogether desert the prohibition cause. Such are the natural results of the periodical failures of the prohibition candidates.

The third party is composed of two distinct classes of men, whose present ends may be similar, but whose motives are widely different. The first class comprises the ardent advocates of prohibition, who can think of nothing else. They have been so much impressed by the evils of the liquor traffic that they can not rest till the land is free from its blighting curse. Everything seems to them unimportant when compared with prohibition. The tariff, civil service reform, the southern problem, foreign affairs, and the other questions of the day are overlooked by them. They take no interest in them. They say that when we obtain prohibition we can then dispose of these things. Till that desired end is accomplished they care not what becomes of the ship of state. Indeed, some of the more enthusiastic ones go so far as to say that the country deserves to be let go to ruin while she is afflicted with those festering sores, the open saloons. Although we may disagree with these good people, and even those of us who favor prohibition may reprobate the means which they use, still every honest man must respect their sincerity, their disinterestedness, and their untiring energy. It is the mistake which they make in regard to the means they take to effect their reform that separates them from other temperance people. They are too oblivious of the ways of the world. Even though we sympathize with them, we find it almost impossible to work with them. Yet we hope that there may be some among them, who prefer practical politics to chimeras, and in their love of the ideal do not entirely overlook the real. To such, what we have to say on the subject is addressed.

But of the other class of people, who compose the third party, few complimentary things can be said. Mingled with the enthusiasts, of whom we have just spoken, are numbers of disgruntled politicians, "sore-heads and disappointed workers," who fly to the prohibitionists for consolation. Their own party refuses them the consideration which, in their immense conceit, they think themselves entitled, and they join the third party to revenge themselves and to gain a little notoriety. They like to manipulate primaries, run conventions, and preside at meetings. In the prohibition army they are respected as men of experience in the ways that are dark and tricks that are vain of politicians, and are permitted to spread themselves on all occasions. Happy in their own temporary prominence, they try to form third parties everywhere, and thus to obtain the authority and influence which their ambition craves. As for prohibition, they care no more for it than they do for Choctaw. If it were an accomplished fact their occupation would be gone. They know this, and instead of pursuing the reasonable way to bring it about, they devote themselves to the perpetuation of the useless third party. To this class of so-called prohibitionists we have nothing to say. They are powerless for any purpose of good, and only valuable to those who wish to do harm. The only thing we can suggest to cure their restless and un-satisfied cravings after notoriety, is a healing lotion to be applied night and morning to their "sore heads."

The third party is a mistake. The honest advocate of prohibition is wasting his energies in the wrong direction. Prohibition will never be brought about by giving one horse politician an opportunity to pose as candidates before an indulgent public. The only proper means, the only means to secure success, is the enlightenment of the voters. When the majority is convinced that liquor drinking is a terrible evil, eating the very heart out of the body politic, then and only then, will it be possible to have prohibition. Sincere temperance people should devote themselves to the promulgation of their doctrines. The proper arena for the labors of the prohibitionists are the school, the church, the newspaper and the home. Once gain the consensus of the majority and the necessary laws will gladly be enacted by the legislature. Teach, lecture and persuade, let "the still, small, voice be heard, and the triumph will come as surely as came the moral victories of the past. The hydra-headed monster of the saloon power will then lie prostrate at the feet of that modern Hercules, Public Opinion, and this is the only possible way by which the desired end can be obtained.

BUSINESS GROWTH.

To show how rapidly business is improving throughout the country, read the following list of new industries going into operation. The list was collected at random from various sources:

New Hampshire—A Concord man is building a woolen mill at Penacook.

Massachusetts—A cotton mill of 40,000 spindles is announced for Weir village.

Rhode Island—The Tylers have leased and will operate the Washington mill estate, to extend their plant for the manufacture of yarns and wool scouring.

Vermont—The Svane company will build a new iron foundry at Montpelier.

Connecticut—Clark's new stockinet factory at Manchester Green will go into operation about New Year's. The Seamless Rubber Company of New Haven is to make extensive additions to its plant.

New-York—Little Falls is to have a knitting mill. The Nye & Waite Carpet Company of Auburn is increasing its looms over 50 per cent.

Texas—Woolen mill company organized to build at Fort Smith. Another one to enlarge the mills at Jefferson. Cotton rope and sisal rope factory to be built at Galveston.

Virginia—Organization of a company to build extensive iron works at Balcony Falls.

Mississippi—The State Alliance has bought the cotton mill at Canton for a bagging factory.

South Carolina—The DeKalb cotton mills at Camden are preparing to begin operations.

Georgia—The Gainesville cotton mills have ordered new looms for making bagging at the rate of 4,500 yards a day.

Ohio—New foundry to be built at the Springfield machine tool works.

Illinois—New blast furnace under construction at the Illinois steel works at Joliet.

The success of the striking dock laborers of London is one of the greatest triumphs in the history of organized labor. If the improvement in trade continues this strike may be regarded as the first of a series that will ere long sweep over England with irrepressible force. The elements which made the strike successful are found near the surface. In the first place, the wages were shamefully out of proportion to the labor required and bore no just relation to the profits of the dock companies. Next in importance was the fact that in demanding better wages and shorter hours the laborers demeaned themselves in an orderly manner and refrained from violence thus winning the sympathy and support of the public. And, lastly, having public sentiment in their favor they received the advice and counsel of men of the highest character and influence.

Still they are shooting Negroes by hundreds in the South.

ABOUT EX-COMMISSIONER TANNER.

It seems that Corporal Tanner is now an ex-Commissioner of Pensions. There was certainly a disagreement between the commissioner and his chief, Mr. Noble, and if the two gentlemen could not get along congenially it certainly was better for Mr. Tanner to step down and out.

Much that is published about the affair is based on mere imagination. It is not true that Mr. Tanner and his actions were ever made the subject of a cabinet meeting; it is not true that the President requested Tanner's resignation. Mr. Tanner was made aware of Mr. Noble's sentiments and voluntarily resigned. Thus all the gentlemen were actuated by the most honorable motives.

Mr. Tanner retires with the assurance that his actions in connection with the pensions granted are entirely honorable, but not in accord with others even higher in position than he. We do not believe that he will be offered or will accept another office with the administration.

We do not hesitate to acknowledge that the department, under Corporal Tanner, has made mistakes. The most glaring one was the ruling that a dishonorable discharge would be no bar to receiving a pension. But on the general subject of pensions we are in the main in accord with the retiring commissioner.

We believe that all honorably discharged soldiers should receive pensions, and that many who now receive them do not receive enough. Every male relative of the writer old enough to be a soldier went to war, endured wounds and imprisonment, but never asked for a pension. That was only because they consider themselves abundantly able to make their own living and would scorn to ask the government for help; but that does not alter the position we assume that every soldier who needs a pension should receive it. There is only one limit we would put to it and that is the power of the government to pay such pensions. The government is said to be rich, with a handsome annual surplus. There is no class of citizens to whom the government owes greater gratitude than to the men who put their lives in danger for its perpetuity. They thought not of danger, they left home and kindred, they endured perils which try men's souls—all for patriotism. Men who work long for mere private corporations at employments which are not dangerous are often pensioned—why should the government hesitate? We do not advocate a pension system so extensive that the amount of the surplus would be exceeded.

Some people say that this surplus is raised by a tax on the people. We do not regard either the tariff or the internal revenue in this light. The tariff is paid by foreigners for the privilege of selling goods in this country and really has the effect of benefiting American labor. The internal revenue is paid by those who can indulge in such luxuries as whiskey and tobacco. If this money is distributed to veterans who need it the result cannot but be most beneficial to the entire country.

That the veterans deserve this help is a proposition which admits of no dispute. The only question is—Can the Government afford it? It certainly can at present—hence, we advocate the enlargement of the pension system until all Union people made to suffer by the war have their absolute needs supplied.

PEOPLE of Pennsylvania who are voters should remember that it was only after the state got into the control of the republicans that the state debt began to decrease and it was paid off, and our finances put in good condition. Democracy left a debt of nearly $40,000,000, as a legacy for the republicans to pay. Notwithstanding we have passed through a great war since 1860, with a large increased expenditure in consequence, and the wants of the state have also largely increased during these years, the republicans by their wise management of our finances have decreased the debt year after year so that at the end of Gov. Beaver's term we will be almost clear of debt. That is the record of Republican management in Pennsylvania. It is possible it might have been better, but Democracy never showed anything near like it, when it had a chance. We know what Republican housekeeping has done for the State, and we also know what Democracy did when it ran things. Whether it could be better now, we know but it is a dangerous thing to try experiments, especially when everything is going well and satisfactorily and the people's rights are being taken care of.

Will Not Pander to Prejudice.

Chauncey M. Depew is not one of the kind of men who are willing to disown their calling to secure political preferment. A suggestion was made to him in a speech welcoming him back from Europe on Wednesday that if he would cease to be a railroad man long enough for the people to forget his past business he might be elected president of the United States. He promptly replied, "There are 750,000 railroad men in the United States with whom I have been a fellow worker for twenty-five years. Were I to do such a thing as has been suggested it would be a reflection upon them and upon the right of every man in this free country to engage in a respectable occupation and earn his living in a reputable way. Sooner than do that I would spurn the presidency of this country if it should be offered to me on a gold plate." These are manly words fitly spoken.

It is a common thing for demagogues to denounce men connected with the management of railroad and other such corporations, and it is unquestionable that there is a prejudice among unthinking people against them. But it is a false prejudice. What would the country be without such corporations? And what is a corporation but a method of enabling persons of small means to engage in large enterprise.

It is true that unscrupulous men have made use of railroad corporations to rob the people by stock watering and other such schemes. But there are men of this kind engaged in every line of business. It furnishes no reason for the wholesale denunciation of the officers of corporations, and Mr. Depew has shown his sterling qualities by refusing to pander to this prejudice.

Republican "Extravagance."

Democratic papers are talking about Republican extravagance. This is nonsense. Let the figures tell the truth. They show that President Cleveland's Administration was the most extravagant the country has ever had.

President Cleveland's Administration had in four years appropriations to the amount of $1,089,558,444. This is $96,385,813 more than the previous Republican Administration had; it is $400,000,000 more than was appropriated for the Administration of President Hayes, and it is more than the sum which the Government cost under President Grant, at a time when every Democratic paper was yelling extravagance and corruption.

Not satisfied with getting $96,000,000, or about 10 per cent more than had run the Government under a Republican Administration, President Cleveland, in the estimates submitted, asked for $113,419,791 more than his predecessor had in four years, or almost 12 per cent more than had seemed wise or prudent to a Republican Administration, whose estimates were a constant text for Democratic sermons on extravagance and public waste. Turning from the appropriations, which cover all outlays, compare the "net ordinary expenditures" of these economical Democrats with their wasteful, extravagant predecessors. Extending interest and payments on the public debt, here is the money it took to run the Government, with what the Record calls a Republican "policy of deliberate extravagance," and the painstaking economy, the frugal thrift, the cheese-paring simplicity of our Democratic friends:

Grant, first term	$500,000,000
Grant, second term	$779,215,000
Hayes	$423,311,000
Cleveland	$1,089,558,444

The New England wool growers deny indignantly the charge made by President Delano, of the National Wool Grower's Association, that they want free trade. They want protection, and lots of it. The Mugwumps will have to revise their free trade arguments. Nothing makes a Mugwump so unhappy as the yielding of a point in favor of the protective tariff.

F. W. GESSWEIN, a millionaire capitalist in New York, was shot and killed on Friday last by Christian Deyhle, an aged man and an inventor. It is said that Gesswein had defrauded Deyhle of a valuable patent and the murder was an act of revenge.

The lord mayor of London and Cardinal Manning were zealous in promoting plans to end the London strike and to their efforts the successful and peaceful settlement of all difficulties is largely due.

Our Story Teller.

OUR COOK'S FOLLOWER.

I, Philip LeStrange, after an absence of two months, find myself seated once more at my own breakfast table and opposite my wife, Susie, the fascinating little witch for whom I broke my vows of eternal bachelorhood. Seven years of married life, with attendant cares, have scarcely left their mark on her; she is rosy and dimpled still, although the mother of two bouncing cherubs. Now Susie is just the dearest little wife that a man was ever blessed with, but she is not very clever at house-keeping. We have been at the mercy of servant girls all these seven years; in fact, our experience has been about parallel with that of David Copperfield and his child wife Dora.

This morning, as I enter the dining-room, the order and neatness are unusual. I have noticed something of the sort about the other rooms, but attributed it to an extra effort on Susie's part in honor of my home-coming. Our parlors generally appear well enough by daylight, the disorder gives a sort of social, free-and-easy air that friends seem to enjoy. But this dainty neatness is for that reason only the more apparent in the bold glare of daylight, and wholly unaccountable in my house.

The general air of comfort extends over the breakfast table; the silver glitters, the linen is snowy white, and the breakfast served perfection. Muffins light and delicious, beefsteak done to a turn, and the coffee—ye gods, what a cup of coffee! Clear and fragrant. Shall I ever again be able to swallow the thick, muddy decoction usually served us?

Susie sits mutely enjoying my evident perplexity. My mother has been staying with us, but left three days ago. There is nothing about this breakfast.

Eureka! I have the solution! My honored parent has given some lessons. "So mother has taught Bridget to cook a steak?" I ventured at last.

"You have a very high opinion of Bridget's ability. I don't believe," with emphasis, "that a thousand lessons would make such a cook of her."

Susie not offering to enlighten me as to who such a cook might be, I venture again.

"You have learned? Well, you do your teacher credit."

"Mistaken again!" laughs Susie. "My ability is inferior to Bridget's. I am afraid, although I intend to try and learn something about cooking. I think I'd starve on Biddy's food after this. I'll be magnanimous and explain. You know I have the best mother-in-law in the world."

"Far be it from me to say anything against your mother-in-law."

"As I was about to remark, I was glad to have your mother visit me, but I knew that she would not enjoy such miserably cooked food as often appeared on our table. So in my letter I told her how efficient my servants were especially cook. Then she wrote me that if I discharged Bridget she would send me a cook—one that she taught herself, a capable, neat and quiet girl. There could be only one objection; she had a 'follower' and probably before many months he would persuade her to return to Millville and cook for him. And oh, Phil! How I wish he would come and take her. If it wouldn't seem so ungrateful to your mother, I would send her away this very instant."

"Why, Susie, send away such a treasure—a girl that makes coffee like this—the author of those muffins? Are you demented?"

"Phil, if you know what I have suffered since she came! When you've heard her—"

"I look at my watch, and it is high time I left for the office."

"Dear, I've not another moment to spare; I'll hear about it this evening." And with a good-morning I'm off.

Six o'clock finds me, after a romp with the children in the nursery, hurrying to dress for dinner. I am anxious to learn why Susie wants to get rid of a girl whose cooking equals my mother's. I say this only to myself. I always refrain from any allusion to my mother's cooking in Susie's presence.

I have just finished my toilette when the most blood-curdling shriek greets my ears, followed instantly by another and yet another in quick succession. By the time I reach the nursery at the far end of the hall, there have been at least a half dozen such screams that can be heard almost a block away.

Visions of Maud enveloped in flames or Harry's mangled form lying on the pavement beneath—the sounds seem to come from below—flit before me. I open the door, my heart beating wildly. There sits Maud and Harry, calmly looking at a picture book.

"I say, pap, did she scare you?" says Harry, on catching sight of my face. "Don't she holler awful?"

"What is it?" I manage to ask.

The reaction on finding the children so almost overcame me.

"Why, it's Kate, the cook, she hollers like that every time she sees a bug or a mouse."

Susie enters the nursery.

"Now, then, you have heard her, Phil. Isn't it terrible. I can't get accustomed to it, it makes me nervous all the time. Like you, at first I always thought of the children."

"What frightened her?"

"Oh, a couple of big spiders ran from behind a jar when she moved it. Nurse says the police think you are a wife beater, and say I ought to make a complaint, and some of the neighbors declare that we keep a private insane asylum, and have a very violent patient. How I wish that follower would come and take her! He has never been to see her, I am afraid he is only a myth."

"But, Susie, it is only habit; can't you reason with her and persuade her to try to overcome it?"

"I have tried again and again."

"Think what a treasure of a cook she is."

"I know, and so neat; the kitchen is as clean and cozy as your mother's. The range always shines so that you can see your face in it, and the hearth is kept painted a bright red; she wasn't contented until she got the paint for it; she said it kept her from getting homesick."

"About how often do these lung exercises occur, Susie?"

"Sometimes several times a day; as often as the slightest excuse can be found for them. She is so very timid or nervous, that to speak to her without giving her warning of your presence will send her into the area screaming."

"Three weeks passed away, and cook's reputation is firmly established. Our friends congratulate us. I have not been treated to another exhibition of her vocal powers, and I wonder why. Susie is always wishing for that unknown to make his appearance to carry off our cook, the only one we have ever been fortunate enough to employ who was competent enough to prepare a meal we were not ashamed to invite our friends to partake of."

Again I am dressing for dinner, when screams of 'murder! murder!' echo through the house, then a terrible yell that sounds like a human voice, a noise as of some one falling is followed by an instant of awful stillness. Again I hear a smothered scream, as of some half suffocated voice that resembles Susie's.

As I am not in condition to appear outside of my room, I become almost frantic. I grasp some of my clothes and struggle into them, and rush down the stairs. Policemen are struggling with a figure in the doorway; another, a female, seemingly lying in a pool of blood, is at the foot of the stairs. Susie is rising from the floor, her face, the dearest face on earth, white and ghastly, streaked with blood, gives me such a shock that I can scarcely open my arms as she totters to me.

"You are not going to faint? Where are you hurt?"

But Susie is not hurt, and Susie never faints. She throws her arms around my neck, lays her head on my shoulder and begins to cry.

"What has happened, darling? Can you tell me?"

"Cook is killed—murdered by a burglar!" she sob.

There is something strange about it. Strange that a burglar should enter the kitchen at such an hour. Perhaps it was a blood-thirsty madman. It may have been that the screams of cook had saved our lives.

Such thoughts rushed through my mind while I put Susie in a chair and close the hall door. The policemen have disappeared by this time with their captive.

Cook shows signs of reviving. I am bending over her, trying to ascertain the extent of her injuries, when the door opens again, and a man enters, accompanied by a policeman, who hands me a letter saying:

"There, that will explain, I hope. The girl's a fool to make such a row for nothing."

"She has been murdered," I say, although she is making an effort to rise; yet there is no blood to show she is wounded.

"Read your letter," cries Susie.

It is from my mother. I open and read it. In the meanwhile, Susie helps cook to rise. At the first glimpse of the policeman she screams, then she takes a look at the man standing by my side, screams again, rushes to him, and throwing herself in his arms, begs him to take her away from burglars.

"It is all right; it's the follower," I say to my wife.

The policeman has picked up a small tin pale, from which red paint is trickling on the rug. It is soon all explained. The follower appeared just as cook was putting away the can of red paint; she saw a man standing in the open doorway and ran screaming with the can, up stairs, where she met my wife, and bumping together they both fell cook fainting away, the red paint splattered Susie's face. The policeman rushed in, captured the follower and carried him off, but finally listened to his entreaties to deliver the letter to me, which has explained his identity.

So nobody is hurt, and we got rid of our treasure. Now Susie is struggling with the mysteries of the culinary art, and I again patronize my favorite restaurant.

FUN WITH THE OLD MAN.

How He Took the Sauce Out of a Pert Waiter Girl.

He was a meek-looking old gentleman from the country, and as he took his seat at the dining room table the drummers looked at him over their soup spoons. They noted his weather-beaten face, his wet hair carefully parted and brushed around over his ears, and his air of diffidence as he nervously fingered his fork; and when the waiter girl stood at his side and winked at the boot-and-shoe man they were all attention.

"Soup?" she asked.

The old man seemed a bit surprised at the brevity of the bill of fare, and fidgeted about as though waiting for her to say something more.

"Would you like some soup?" said the girl, with a side glance at the coffee and spice man.

"Isn't particular about soup as I know of," answered the old man.

"Boil' mut'n, capersauce, roas' beef, r's' lamb, r's' veal, fricassee chick'n, cole ham-tongue, chick'n salad, fritters, boil' n' baked p'tatoes," said the girl with lightning-like rapidity.

The old man looked kind of helpless, and the boys felt a little sorry for him as he kept his eyes fastened on the fork, which he shoved from side to side with his fingers.

"I guess I'll take—I guess you'll have to say that again," he said, looking up, and the girl rattled the whole thing off in exactly the same time as before.

The old man looked round the table and caught sight of a drummer winking at the girl. Then he jerked his head around, and looking her straight in the face, he said:

"You may gimme s'm bile cornbees 'n' cabbage, roas' beef, veal 'n' mut'n, cole chick'n 'n' turkey 'n' tongue, 'n' s'm ham 'n' eggs 'n' codfish cakes 'n' sausage 'n' beefsteak 'n' a piece o' punkin pie 'n' cup of coffee, sis, 'n' now see ef yer kin make yer little legs fly 's fast as ye kin yer tongue, for I want'er git home; there's a shower comin' up."

The girl hesitated, turned red, and then made a break for the kitchen, while the drummer laughed and the old man gazed out of the window at the gathering clouds.

Heavily Handicapped.

Harper's Bazar says: "Woman can not move as comfortably in her iustitutive as a man." No; and she can't undo four buttons and kick the whole arrangement off while walking from the door to the bed either. And she can't put it on between the ringing of the breakfast bell and the asking of the blessing, either. And yet she thinks there are some things in politics that she can reform. She thinks she can make the men believe she can do some things far better than they can. And still it is a lamentable fact, patent to all men, that when there are three women on a sleeping car, and only two dressing rooms for ladies, those women have to arise at 4 o'clock in order to permit two of them to dress in time for the 8 o'clock breakfast. There are some things that woman—God bless her—can't reform, and some things that she can; some that she tries to and some that she just won't. Now if she will only strengthen out the problems and possibilities she can work wonders. And if she keeps them snarled up, why she can work wonders, also. But the wonder will be why she works.

WONDEROUS TALKS FROM KANSAS.

Wheat Stacked in the Roads—Corn So High That It Has to Be Cut from Balloons.

Kansas City Times.

Every one who comes to Kansas City from Kansas these days has his own particular stock of stories to tell about the wonderful crops in that State. Among the Sunflower pilgrims who landed in the city on Saturday was Charley Barrett, the good looking and talking traveling passenger agent of the Missouri Pacific. He had spent four or five days in Southern Kansas and his mouth was going at the rate of 500 revolutions a minutes about crops, when he was flagged by a Times man on Main street.

"What!" he exclaimed. "You never saw the like! The farmers down in Southern Kansas had to rent the public roads to get room enough to stack the wheat. Wasn't room enough in the fields to hold the stacks. I saw one—"

"How is the fruit crop?"

"Fruit! You never saw the like! Apples as big as cannon balls growing in clusters as big as haystacks. I saw one apple that—"

"Don't the trees break down?"

"Trees! You never saw the like! The farmers planted sorghum in the orchards and the stalks grew up like telegraph poles and supported the limbs. I saw one stalk of sorghum that was two feet—"

"How is the broom-corn crop?"

"Broom corn crop! You never saw the like! There hasn't been a cloudy day in Southern Kansas for a month. Can't cloud up. The broom corn grew so high that it kept the clouds swept off the face of the sky as clean as a new floor. They will have to cut the corn down if it gets too dry. Some of the broom corn stalks are so high that—"

"How is the corn crop?"

"Corn! You never saw the like! Down in the Neosho and Fall River and Arkansas bottoms the corn is as high as a house. They use step-ladders to gather roasting-eare."

"Aren't step ladders pretty expensive?"

"Expensive! Well, I should say so, but that isn't the worst of it. The trouble is that the children climb up into the corn stalks to hunt for eagle's nests and sometimes fall out and kill themselves. Fourteen funerals in one county last week from that cause. I attended all of them; that is why I am so sad. And, mind you, the corn is not more than half grown. A man at Arkansas City has invented a machine which he calls 'the solar corn harvester and child protector.' It is inflated with gas like a balloon and floats over the corn tops, and the occupants reach down and cut off the ears of corn with a cavalry saber. Every Kansas farmer has a cavalry saber, and—"

"Do they make much cider in Kansas?"

"Cider! You never saw the like! Oceans of it! Most of the farmers in Crowley county have filled their cisterns with cider. A proposition was made a few days since to the water works company of Arkansas City to supply the town with cider through the mains, but the company was compelled to decline because they were afraid the cider would rust the pumps. They were sorry, but they said they would have to continue to furnish water, although it cost more. I saw one farmer who—"

"How is the potato crop?"

"Potatoes! You never saw the like! A man in Sedgwick county dug a potato the other day that was so big he used the cavity it grew in for a cellar. I saw one potato that—"

"The people must be happy over their big crops?"

"Happy! You never saw the like! I know men in the Arkansas Valley who were too poor this time last year to flag a bread wagon, and now they have pie three times a day. One fellow that—"

But the reporter, just at this point, had a pressing engagement elsewhere.

The Good Times Coming.

Cincinnati Enquirer (Dem.)

The tone of business men in this city is decidedly more cheerful than it has been. There is confidence that we have entered upon a season that will witness phenomenal business activity. This belief is not confined to the city. It pervades the adjacent country. Signs of the increase of activity are seen in nearly all the manufacturing establishments. The market is bare and orders are pouring in for goods. In some factories night work is the rule already. Prices continue very low, but with the multiplication of orders advances can not help but follow. One of our manufacturers says the present situation almost duplicates that of 1878, when the country was entering upon one of the most prosperous eras in its history. The outlook is bright. Every prospect cheers. The good times seem to have come.

The new train that has just been built for the Car has a covering of iron on the outside and on the inside is lined with with cork eight inches thick. If it were not for news items like this about the Car's measures for guarding against assassination one would forget all about the Nihilists, they are very rarely mentioned. They must be more active than the world outside of Russia knows anything about.

Their Need—Inventor: "Eureka! Eureka!" Kansas Rafter: "What air

you Eureka'er about?" Inventor: "I have just completed my duplex indicator, a little instrument that will inform its possessor of the approach of a cyclone before—"

The attention of Chicago, St. Louis, St. Paul, and other Western towns given to inflating their size is called to the astonishing result of the latest census of the Chinese, taken themselves. After extensive figuring, the census-takers announce that the population of their country amounts to 880,000,000. After the manner that the Chinese papers state that a million of people have been drowned in a flood, and several millions starved to death, and thousands burnt up in a fire, something like this might be expected. For ways that are dark in numbers the Chinese are peculiar.

Some dim idea of eternity may be given by the proposition: When the Cronin jury is completed.

Toronto has put in a bid for the World's Fair of 1892. These Canadians imagine sometimes that they have already annexed themselves to the United States.

Why, Blinkins, that suit looks as if it was made for a man half your size. "Yes, I know, but I am going to a seaside hotel to-morrow for a week, and I want it to fit me when I come home."

Young Husband: "My dear, after a year of unremitting labor and closes economy we have, I find, succeeded in saving about $300. What shall we do with it?" Young Wife: "Well my dear, we both need rest. Let's go to a Summer resort for a week."

"I called sir," said old Jinks to the tailor, "in reference to the letter you sent about the way my son has treated you. I guess you will find him all right in the future, because he has promised me to settle down." "That doesn't interest me," replied the tailor; "I want him to settle up."

Dr. McQuack: "You are foolish to think your wife is likely to die. She is not dangerously ill, and will be up in a day or two. Your love for her fills you with unwarranted fears." Husband: "Ah! if you but knew her, doctor, you'd know that when she stays away from a millinery opening as she did to-day, she is in a dangerous condition."

Doctor (politely, but looking at his watch with visible impatience): Pardon me, madam, but my time is not my own. You have given me all of your symptoms in sufficient detail, and now perhaps you will kindly—er—ah—Husband (not so considerate): "Maria, he doesn't want to hear your tongue any more. He wants to look at it."

"You should try, my dear," said Mrs. Hopewell to her daughter, "to bear patiently with Aunt Harriet's infirmities. She is wealthy, you know, and is now seventy years old." "But it isn't her infirmities that try me," returned the girl, "it's her firmities. I never saw any one so stubborn as all my life!"

HOLD YOUR BREATH.

And Read How a Train May Go From Philadelphia to New York in 30 Minutes.

The Electro-Automatic Transit Company, of Baltimore, has an experimental two mile track in that city on which they have moved a small train at the rate of two miles a minute, using the patent of David G. Weems. Now the same company are applying for right of way to build a five mile circuit at Garden City, L. I., and the inventor promises that within six months he will have a train running at the rate of five miles in one minute.

The five-mile-a-minute railroad is to have a track built on the ground, just like an ordinary track, except that the rails have a wide flange projecting from the inner side. A shoe depending from the car reaches under this flange, and whenever the car tilts the shoe touches the flange and prevents the car from leaving the rails. The motive power is to be electricity, a low-tension, direct current of 250 horse power, supplied by an overhead conductor, borne not upon poles, but upon a succession of frames arching the track. This framework will cover the track for its entire length, and barbed wire will be strung along it to keep cattle and other animals off the track. It will resemble from the outside a long grape arbor. The barbed wires will be insulated, and may be used for telegraphing. The 147 patents which Mr. Weems has obtained include several for using the rails themselves as conductors.

The motor will weigh about three tons. The most novel feature electrically for the invention is the fact that the electricity acts directly upon the driving wheels, the axles of the wheels being used as the core of the motor. This overcomes the difficulty which has heretofore prevented the attaining of a greater speed than twenty miles or so an hour by an electric motor. Mr. Weems says that the motor he has been using at Laurel, lifted from the track, but with the journals weighed to compensate for the relief given them, has been run up to 3,500 revolutions a minute without injury. The wheels of the Garden City motor will be 42 inches in diameter, and at 2,000 revolutions a minute, therefore, will make the circuit of the five mile grape arbor in just one minute, if nothing breaks. The current will be communicated to the motor by means of a small brush sliding along the conductor overhead. The contact will be very slight and the friction small.

The wheels of the motors, and of the cars also, will be inside, and the only projections will be the journals of the wheels on each side. These have to be very wide, to prevent heating, and will be encased in shell like boxes to reduce the resistance to the air as much as possible. The motors and the cars will be telescoped together at the ends when coupled so that the whole train will look as if made in one piece. Besides this, the front of the motor and the rear of the last car will be built out to a point so that the train will slip through the air like a vessel through the water. By an ingenious arrangement the front point can be raised or lowered, varying the upward or downward pressure of the air and lightening or increasing the pressure on the rails.

The automatic train will carry no passengers or employes. It will be controlled entirely from the generating station. The moment the current is broken the brakes are applied. They will stop the train, when going five miles a minute, in 1,000 feet, Mr. Weems says. The brakes stay set until the current begins again. The passage of the train rings a bell at the station, and drops a tag like that of a hotel annunciator every mile or so along the route. The man at the station can thus always tell very nearly where it is. If it has to cross a drawbridge, the opening of the draw will break the current, and the train will be stopped and cannot go on until the draw is closed.

The cars will carry a ton each of express and mail. They will be running from New York to Philadelphia within two years, if the Jersey Legislature doesn't object, Mr. Weems says, and will make the run in twenty minutes. Theoretically the train could run from New York to Chicago in six hours.

The train that will make this terrific speed will be only four feet high, and the cars will be from 20 to 30 feet long. The gauge will be correspondingly narrow. All that is contemplated at first in the use of the system is as an adjunct to the present railroad system for the swift carriage of express, mail and other light goods. Mr. Weems also has his patents for a system of passenger carriages. At present, he says, the system would not be practicable of short distance rapid transit, because to be perfectly safe from breaking down the motors must be started comparatively slow and reach their regular speed gradually. All Mr. Weems' efforts have been concentrated upon getting a machine that would go so fast for long distances.

It is said that the track will cost about $5,000 a mile, and that for $12,000,000 a line could be built and equipped from New York to Chicago. There will be two tracks at Garden City, one within the other; the first one completed will be used for the automatic system. Passengers will be carried on the other side.

FORGING THE CHAIN.

More Evidence Against the Cronin Suspects Discovered.

IN THE CARLSON COTTAGE.

Burke, Cooney, O'Sullivan and Coughlin Were Seen Entering and Leaving the Place on the Night of the Murder. Surgical Instruments Found.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—A local paper says: "Positive evidence has been discovered to prove that Dan Coughlin, Martin Burke, Patrick Cooney and Patrick O'Sullivan were in the Carlson cottage on the night of May 3 till 1 o'clock in the morning of May 4, the day of the murder of Dr. Cronin.

"The Robinson, the Lake View policeman who recently told his story of finding the Carlson cottage, saw the four men leave Nennings' saloon, No. 1750 Ashland avenue, walk north on Ashland avenue and enter the Carlson cottage.

"But this is not the only proof which the state's attorney now has in the possession of the truthfulness of these facts. Nennings' bartender has told the state's attorney that on the night of May 3 four men, one of whom was his acquaintance, O'Sullivan, came into the saloon and called for drinks. After drinking a couple of rounds the four men went away. He says that they proceeded north, stopping at about where he supposed the Carlson cottage must be.

The Bartender's Darning Story.
"This was about 11 o'clock, and after waiting a few minutes he shut up the saloon for the night and went up to visit his friend, John Ertel, at No. 1,600 Ashland avenue. Here he stayed and chatted with Mr. Ertel and his son till nearly 1 o'clock, when he bade them good night and started for his own home, which was with the Nennings family, over the saloon.

"On his way down Ashland avenue he passed the Carlson cottage, diagonally in the rear of which is O'Sullivan's icehouse and barn. As he passed he saw four men leave by the side door and make their way across to the icehouse's barn.

"As stated before, he knew O'Sullivan personally, and he is positive that he was the first of the four men to reach the barn, where, after opening the big sliding door, he waited for the other three to pass in, and then closed the door. The other three men, the bartender tells the state's attorney, were the same ones who had been drinking with the iceman in Nennings' saloon a couple of hours before.

"The bartender was taken into the jail and shown the Cronin prisoners. He recognized and spoke to O'Sullivan at once, and after taking a good look at Coughlin and Burke, declared that he could positively identify them as the men he saw with the iceman on the night of May 3 and in the early morning of May 4.

One of the State's Main Witnesses.
"This bartender, whose name is being kept a close secret, will be one of the state's main witnesses."

The Globe says a case of surgical instruments which Dr. Cronin carried with him on the night of the murder has been found and is in the hands of the police.

The Tribune says it is stated by "a man in a position to know" that within four days of the latest four arrests will be made in connection with the Cronin case. It is stated that enough evidence has been obtained to show their direct connection with the plot, but one more witness is necessary to supply the connecting testimony. This is expected to be secured soon.

There Was a Trial.

A morning paper says it has transpired that Ed Spillman, of Peoria, the delegate of the Clan-na-Gael, had furnished the state's attorney with the correspondence between himself and Beggs, the senior guardian of camp No. 29, relating to Dr. Cronin's trial by the camp. The correspondence sets at rest all question as to whether or not there was a trial. It proves there was.

It is further said that a salesman for Marshall Field & Co., whose name has never been mentioned in connection with the conspiracy, will be shown to have been intrusted with the execution of a portion of the plot. He is a North Side Irishman of some prominence. In the latter part of February he went to Ireland. He gave it out that he was going on business for his house. He returned on May 11, a week after the murder.

Inquiry made at Marshall Field & Co.'s has disclosed the fact that he did not go abroad for the house, and the object of his journey has not been satisfactorily explained. There are reasons, it is said, for believing that his mission was to arrange for the reception of Dr. Cronin's clothes, shipped in Burke's iron box, on the other side.

Ives Looks Pale.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Frederick H. Ives continued his testimony in the Ives case, and although submitted to a rigid cross-examination by Lawyer Brooke, his former testimony was not shaken. Ives looks pale and nervous and the severe strain seems to tell on him. At 10 o'clock the court took a recess.

When to Pick Apples.

For immediate consumption fruit of all kinds ought to be fully ripe before picking. But if a supply of any one variety of apples is desired to last some time a different method must be pursued. If the fruit is picked just as it begins to turn, put in dry clean barrels, kept as cool and dry as possible, it will keep much longer than that which is left on the tree to become fully ripe before picking. Of course it need not be mentioned that the only sound apples will keep no matter how well handled and cared for. For instance, if the Fameuse is picked when it first begins to color, and treated in the above way it is easily kept and will be in good marketing condition before winter apples are in season, and long afterwards.

By their Words you shall know them.

"No, sir," said Farmer Thistlepod, "you needn't tell me anything about the beauties of a free government. I'm sick of it. I've toiled and moiled and dug and delved on this farm, boy and man, forty-five years, and all I've been able to do has been to pay taxes, keep up the interest on a mortgage and wish I had money enough to take out a little insurance on the stock, but I can't do it. Pastor was here this morning urging me to try to do a little more for the church, and I had to tell him I was going to give up my pew at the end of this quarter; just got to do it; I haven't the money, I tell you, and what's more, you can't make it on a farm in this country. I don't know a farmer in York state that is making enough to pay for labor on the farm."

What Makes Wrinkles.

"It is customary to say the wrinkles come from worrying, but the truth is that most of them come from laughing," says a well known physician.

"To know how to laugh is just as important as to know when to do it. If you laugh with the sides of your face, the skin will work loose, in time, the wrinkles will form in exact accordance with the kind of a laugh you have. The man who always wears a smirk will have a series of semicircular wrinkles covering his cheeks.

"When a gambler who has been accustomed to suppressing his feelings laughs, a deep line forms on each side of his nose and runs to the upper corner of his mouth. In time this line extends to the chin and assumes the shape of a half moon. A cadaverous person with a wax-like skin is very apt to have two broadly marked wrinkles, one running from the jaw and the other under the eye. These meet at right angles at the cheek bones and look as though they formed a knot at the apex. The scholar's wrinkles form on his brow, while the scheming politician's come round his eyes, where they look for all the world like the spokes of a wheel."

The Action of Mineral Waters in General.

In our article of yesterday we told you about the action of water in general upon the human system we now propose to have a word to say about the action of Mineral waters in general upon the human system. Mineral water, in the true acceptance of the term, is one which by virtue of the ingredients contained therein acts upon the human system as a medicine. The true origin of mineral springs is still a mystery to philosophers. Most writers, however, hold to the opinion that mineral springs derive their flow from the fall of rain, or are the result of earthquakes and volcanic eruptions. The solvent power of water is unequalled by any other fluid, and no rocks, however compact, can resist its action; it will penetrate every crevice and fissure of the earth. Water falling from the clouds and passing deep down into the earth filled with mineral rocks and beds, its solvent power absorbs and takes up the various salts in all their freshness and chemical purity, and it again bursts forth from Nature's laboratory to restore failing health and wasted energy, and when thus loaded with mineral agents it stimulates the arterial and venous currents, opens the pores of the skin, increases the flow of urine, washes out the alimentary canal, and gives tone, mobility and energy to the whole body, and is highly essential in the process of digestion, of absorption and secretion.

In our next article we will speak of the action of the celebrated Magnesia water from the Magnesia Spring of Bedford upon the human system, this is the water that we keep for sale at the Eureka Grocery store, High St., Bellefonte, next door to post office. Fresh groceries always on hand. Call and see us.

To Our Neighbors.

The question is often asked by our neighbors, "Where I wonder, can I get a pure stimulant?" It is a fact that there is scarcely a roof under which you can not find a stimulant of some kind. Old people prolong life with it; sick people have it to sustain life; well people may and do use it to make life more enjoyable, but where will we advise our readers to buy it? We learn from the most reliable source that Max Klein is one of the most popular and respected citizens of this country. At his home his word is taken unhesitatingly. To him we can cheerfully recommend our readers for anything in the liquor line. He authorizes us to say that for $1.00 you can buy one quart of six year old rye, or six quarts for $5.00. His "Silver Age" at $1.50 per quart is without doubt the best whiskey know. Send for price list and complete catalogue. His address is, Max Klein, 82 Federal St., Allegheny, Pa.

The Art of Prosperity.

The Eureka man has been doing for some time past considerable advertising, and as I do not want to get all the good there is in this world, let my brother merchants take a word of advice from me. Some have said to me, "Well, you can afford it, it don't cost you anything." But listen. I do not get it for nothing. The Eureka Grocery store pays for every line of advertising it does, and I have not put a single column into the papers that has not paid two dollars for every one spent by myself or that would have to be spent by any other store in town that would attempt the same thing. And we are now just beginning to reap the full benefit of this labor.

Ask anyone at all acquainted with our business and they will tell you that it is constantly increasing; that it has constantly increased ever since we began, and that our success is due to newspaper advertising. I do not want to be the only merchant in town that can truthfully say that while all around us works are stopping, men are complaining that work is dull, that the Eureka is the only store whose business is not feeling the depression.

I am conducting three newspapers in this town and I can now speak from experience when I say to you that it will pay you to advertise in these papers; that it will help you much more than your wildest fancy dreams. I will set the Eureka advertisements into the remotest corner to give you the best place, or just the place you want.

People will read the Eureka articles any how, no matter where I place them. Now, believe me, "it is straight." I know it will do you good, and in the light of my own experience I advise you to try it, and if any of your customers want anything you have not got send them to the Eureka Grocery store, next door to Post Office, Bellefonte, Pa., and we will supply them, and then look out. You may never get them back again, but if you don't we will blame that on Smith, that is if you are in the grocery trade.

Tell me not that advertising is at best so empty dream. For its charms are more surprising (and the Eureka man, who has tried it tells you plainly that its effects are far more so).

Than its dull old-fashioned practitioners could ever deem.

And which ever way you turned, There will find upon the whole, Those who advertise in earnest (Yes, we have only to glance at the most successful firms all over the country to see that those who do the thing properly) Reap the wished-for goal.

Wouldst thou then a lesson borrow? Wouldst thou know the royal way? Advertise then so tomorrow (Don't let a little expense deter you; you are surely casting your bread upon the waters, and you will soon have the satisfaction of reaping that seed tomorrow.) Find it richer than to-day.

Advertise then! No retreating! Let the soulless crockers rave. While your heart with hope is beating (You will always find a lot of people in Bellefonte as everywhere else who are bled to their interests; but while you are making fame and fortune)

They will find oblivion's grave. Printer's ink will lead the battle—Printer's ink, the ink of life. Printer's ink—no din, no rattle—(No, it does its work on the quiet and in the great war of commerce it is springing on its toes, when judiciously and thickly laid on, it always) Leads the van against the strife.

Advertisers of remind us. We can make success online. Make our rule and leave behind us. (Exactly, that's just where it comes in. We not only expect to feather our own nest, but we at the Eureka hope to provide for the prosperity and well-being of generations yet unborn, and so leave behind us) What defies the touch of time.

Seeing which, perchance another Struggling man with weary brain, Some non-advertising brother (A good example is always to be commended, especially in the matter of advertising; and many a struggling business man seeing the secret of our success) May with wisdom try again.

Advertise then! Up and doing! So advertise and prosper. And the wider course pursue, (You will find that you will soon be in a position to look the world in the face, if you will only) Learn to advertise and wait!

Of course, there are many ways of advertising, but we are of the opinion that there is no form or method so effective as newspaper advertising. It goes right into the home, and it goes to stay. I do not suppose that an "add" of "New Spring Goods," put in the paper and never changed the year through would do the work it should. I never tried that method. Such an "add" would have to do its most effective work, at least I should think, in the first three months.

Personally, we have always looked upon such work as a public notice that here is a careless merchant. But if you will take hold of this matter, and give it the same attention that you would or should give any other important matter, it can not do otherwise than pay. I speak to you in the light of a year's experience and "I am giving it to you straight."

Action of Waters in general upon the Human System.

FORGING THE CHAIN.

More Evidence Against the Cronin Suspects Discovered.

IN THE CARLSON COTTAGE.

Burke, Cooney, O'Sullivan and Coughlin Were Seen Entering and Leaving the Place on the Night of the Murder. Surgical Instruments Found.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—A local paper says: "Positive evidence has been discovered to prove that Dan Coughlin, Martin Burke, Patrick Cooney and Patrick O'Sullivan were in the Carlson cottage on the night of May 3 till 1 o'clock in the morning of May 4, the day of the murder of Dr. Cronin.

"The Robinson, the Lake View policeman who recently told his story of finding the Carlson cottage, saw the four men leave the Carlson cottage on the night of May 3 till 1 o'clock in the morning of May 4, the day of the murder of Dr. Cronin.

"But this is not the only proof which the state's attorney now has in the possession of the truthfulness of these facts. Nanning's bartender has told the state's attorney that on the night of May 3 four men, one of whom was his acquaintance, O'Sullivan, came into the saloon and called for drinks. After drinking a couple of rounds the four men went away. He says that they proceeded north, stopping at about where he supposed the Carlson cottage must be.

"The Bartender's Damning Story. "This was about 11 o'clock, and after waiting a few minutes he shut up the saloon for the night and went up to visit his friend, John Ertel, at No. 1,905 Ashland avenue. Here he stayed and chatted with Mr. Ertel and his son till nearly 1 o'clock, when he had them good night and started for his own home, which was with the Nanning family, over the saloon.

"On his way down Ashland avenue he passed the Carlson cottage, diagonally in the rear of which is O'Sullivan's icehouse and barn. As he passed he saw four men leave by the side door and make their way across to the icehouse barn.

"As stated before, he knew O'Sullivan personally, and he is positive that he was the first of the four men to reach the barn, where, after opening the big sliding door, he waited for the other three to pass in, and then closed the door. The other three men, the bartender tells the state's attorney, were the same ones who had been drinking with the ice man in Nanning's saloon a couple of hours before. "The bartender was taken into the jail and shown the Cronin prisoners. He recognized and spoke to O'Sullivan at once, and after taking a good look at Coughlin and Burke, declared that he could positively identify them as the men he saw with the ice man on the night of May 3 and in the early morning of May 4.

"One of the State's Main Witnesses. "This bartender, whose name is being kept a close secret, will be one of the state's main witnesses."

The Globe says a case of surgical instruments which Dr. Cronin carried with him on the night of the murder has been found and is in the hands of the police.

The Tribune says it is stated by "a man in a position to know" that within four days after the latest four more arrests will be made in connection with the Cronin case. It is stated that enough evidence has been obtained to show their direct connection with the plot, but one more witness is necessary to supply the connecting testimony. This is expected to be secured soon.

There Was a Trial. A morning paper says it has transpired that Ed Spillman, of Peoria, the delegate of the Clan-na-Gael, had furnished the state's attorney with the correspondence between himself and Beggs, the senior guardian of camp No. 20, relating to Dr. Cronin's trial by the camp. The correspondence set at rest all question as to whether or not there was a trial. It proves there was.

It is further said that a salesman for Marshall Field & Co., whose name has never heretofore been hinted at in connection with the conspiracy, will be shown to have been intrusted with the execution of a portion of the plot. He is a North Side Irishman of some prominence. In the latter part of February he went to Ireland. He gave it out that he was going on business for his house. He returned on May 11, a week after the murder.

Inquiry made at Marshall Field & Co.'s has disclosed the fact that he did not go abroad for the house, and the object of his journey has not been satisfactorily explained. There are reasons, it is said, for believing that his mission was to arrange for the reception of Dr. Cronin's clothes, shipped in Burke's iron box, or the other side.

Ives Looks Pale. NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Frederick H. Short continued his testimony in the Ives case, although submitted to a rigid cross-examination by Lawyer Brooke, his former testimony was not shaken. Ives looks pale and nervous and the severe strain seems to tell on him. At 10 o'clock the court took a recess.

Death of Goddard, the Philanthropist. TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 14.—William Goddard, the millionaire philanthropist and temperance advocate, died suddenly of heart disease. He had just finished offering prayer at the Home for Fallen Women and was announcing a hymn when he fell back gasping and died in a few minutes.

News from Mexico. MATAMOROS, Mex., Sept. 14.—The body of the noted bandit, Trinidad Ortiz, was found hanging to a tree near Capitan Ranch. Domingo Lopez de Lara has received a Federal charter to build a bridge across the Rio Grande between this city and Brownsville, Tex.

People Wish to Succeed Tanager.

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 14.—The Grand Army men of central New York have already organized in behalf of F. L. Poole, of Syracuse, for commissioner of pensions, and several telegrams were sent from here to Washington urging his appointment.

Looking Out for the Crab's Safety. COPENHAGEN, Sept. 14.—The government has received warning of the arrival in Denmark of several needed Nihilists, and great precautions are therefore being taken to prevent the carrying out of any plot against the czar during his coming visit.

A Twenty Year Sentence.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Charles Loucka, a negro, convicted of assault on a widow near Big Flat, has been sentenced to twenty years at hard labor at Auburn. He had served time before for similar offenses.

When to Pick Apples.

For immediate consumption fruit of all kinds ought to be fully ripe before picking. But if a supply of any one variety of apples is desired to last some time a different method must be pursued. If the fruit is picked just as it begins to turn, put in dry clean barrels, kept as cool and dry as possible, it will keep much longer than that which is left on the tree to become fully ripe before picking. Of course it need not be mentioned that the only sound apples will keep no matter how well handled and cared for. For instance, if the Fameuse is picked when it first begins to color, and treated in the above way it is easily kept and will be in good marketing condition before Winter apples are in season, and long afterwards.

By their Words you shall Know Them. "No, sir," said Farmer Thistlepod, "you needn't tell me anything about the beauties of a free government. I'm sick of it. I've toiled and moiled and dug and delved on this farm, boy and man, forty-five years, and all I've been able to do has been to pay taxes, keep up the interest on a mortgage and wish I had money enough to take out a little insurance on the stock, but I can't do it. Pastor was here this morning urg'ing me to try to do a little more for the church, and I had to tell him I was goin' to give up my pew at the end of this quarter; just got to do it; I haven't the money, I tell you, and what's more, you can't make it on a farm in this country. I don't know a farmer in York state that is making enough to pay for labor on the farm."

—Miss Sadie Grove, daughter of Mr. Thomas Grove, of Centre Hall, died on Wednesday night between 12 and 1 o'clock, after a lingering illness. She was 21 years of age on the 1st of June. Her father and mother and three brothers and two sisters, who survive, will very deeply feel the loss to them which her death occasions.

—Some one had a festival in the Court House yard Wednesday evening. We believe that if they had announced the festival in the DAILY NEWS the patronage would have been larger.

What Makes Wrinkles. "It is customary to say the wrinkles come from worrying, but the truth is that most of them come from laughing," says a well known physician.

"To know how to laugh is just as important as to know when to do it. If you laugh with the sides of your face, the skin will work loose, in time, the wrinkles will form in exact accordance with the kind of a laugh you have. The man who always wears a smirk will have a series of semicircular wrinkles covering his cheeks.

"When a gambler who has been accustomed to suppressing his feelings laughs, a deep line forms on each side of his nose and runs to the upper corner of his mouth. In time this line extends to the chin and assumes the shape of a half moon. A cadaverous person with a wax-like skin is very apt to have two broadly marked wrinkles, one running from the jaw and the other under the eye. These meet at right angles at the cheek bones and look as though they formed a knot at the apex. The scholar's wrinkles form on his brow, while the scheming politician's come round his eyes, where they look for all the world like the spokes of a wheel."

The Action of Mineral Waters in General.

In our article of yesterday we told you about the action of water in general upon the human system we now propose to have a word to say about the action of Mineral waters in general upon the human system. Mineral water, in the true acceptance of the term, is one which by virtue of the ingredients contained therein acts upon the human system as a medicine. The true origin of mineral springs is still a mystery to philosophers. Most writers, however, hold to the opinion that mineral springs derive their flow from the fall of rain, or are the result of earthquakes and volcanic eruptions. The solvent power of water is unequalled by any other fluid, and no rocks, however compact, can resist its action; it will penetrate every crevice and fissure of the earth. Water falling from the clouds and passing deep down into the earth filled with mineral rocks and beds, its solvent power absorbs and takes up the various salts in all their freshness and chemical purity, and it again bursts forth from Nature's laboratory to restore failing health and wasted energy, and when thus loaded with mineral agents it stimulates the arterial and venous currents, opens the pores of the skin, increases the flow of urine, washes out the alimentary canal, and gives tone, mobility and energy to the whole body, and is highly essential in the process of digestion, of absorption and secretion.

In our next article we will speak of the action of the celebrated Magnesia water from the Magnesia Spring of Bedford upon the human system, this is the water that we keep for sale at the Eureka Grocery store, High St., Bellefonte, next door to post office. The question is often asked by our neighbors, "Where I wonder, can I get a pure stimulant?" It is a fact that there is scarcely a roof under which you can not find a stimulant of some kind. The Art of Prosperity.

The Eureka man has been doing for some time past considerable advertising, and as I do not want to get all the good there is in this world, let my brother merchants take a word of advice from me. Some have said to me, "Well, you can afford it, it don't cost you anything." But listen. I do not get it for nothing. The Eureka Grocery store pays for every line of advertising it does, and I have not put a single column into the papers that has not paid two dollars for every one spent by myself or that would have to be spent by any other store in town that would attempt the same thing. And we are now just beginning to reap the full benefit of this labor.

Ask anyone at all acquainted with our business and they will tell you that it is constantly increasing; that it has constantly increased ever since we began, and that our success is due to newspaper advertising. I do not want to be the only merchant in town that can truthfully say that while all around us works are stopping, men are complaining that work is dull, that the Eureka is the only store whose business is not feeling the depression.

I am conducting three newspapers in this town and I can now speak from experience when I say to you that it will pay you to advertise in these papers; that it will help you much more than your wildest fancy dreams. I will set the Eureka advertisements into the remotest corner to give you the best place, or just the place you want.

People will read the Eureka articles any how, no matter where I place them. Now, believe me, "it is straight." I know it will do you good, and in the light of my own experience I advise you to try it, and if any of your customers want anything you have not got send them to the Eureka Grocery store, next door to Post Office, Bellefonte, Pa., and we will supply them, and then look out. You may never get them back again, but if you don't we will blame that on Smith, that is if you are in the grocery trade.

Tell me not that advertising is at best an empty dream. For its charms are more surprising (and the Eureka man, who has tried it tells you plainly that its effects are far more astonishing) than its dull old-fashioned practitioners could ever deem.

And which ever way you turn it will find upon the whole, those who advertise in earnest (Yes, we have only to glance at the most successful firms all over the country to see that it is who do the thing properly) cannot reach the wished-for goal.

Wouldst thou then a lesson borrow? Advertise then to-morrow (Don't let a little expense deter you; you are surely casting your bread upon the waters, and you will soon have the satisfaction of knowing that each to-morrow finds thee richer than to-day.)

Advertise then! No retreating! Let the senseless croakers rave. While your heart with hope is beating (You will always find a lot of people in Bellefonte as everywhere else who are blind to their interests; but while you are making fame and fortune)

They will find oblivion's grave. Printer's ink will lead the battle—Printer's ink—no din, no rattle—(No, it does its work in the quiet; and in the great war of competition which is now going on in this town, when judiciously and thickly laid on, it always leads the van against the strife.)

Advertisers oft remind us. We can make success sublime. Make our pile and leave behind us (Exactly, that's just where it comes in. We don't expect to father our own nest, but we at the Eureka hope to provide for the prosperity and well-being of generations yet unborn, and so leave behind us) Wist desire the touch of time.

Seeing which, perchance another Struggling man with weary brain, Some non-advertising brother, (A good example is always to be commended, especially in the matter of advertising; and many a struggling business man seeing the secret of our success) May with wisdom try again.

Advertise then! Up and doing! So advert a messer fate, And the wiser course pursuing, (You will find that you will soon be in a position to look the world in the face, if you will only) Learn to advertise and wait!

Of course, there are many ways of advertising, but we are of the opinion that there is no form or method so effective as newspaper advertising. It goes right into the home, and it goes to stay. I do not suppose that an "add" of "New Spring Goods," put in the paper and never changed the year through would do the work it should. I never tried that method. Such an "add" would have to do its most effective work, at least I should think, in the first three months.

Personally, we have always looked upon such work as a public notice that here is a careless merchant. But if you will take hold of this matter, and give it the same attention that you would or should give any other important matter, it can not do otherwise than pay. I speak to you in the light of a year's experience and "I am giving it to you straight."

Action of Waters in general upon the Human System.

We are agents for Centre county, for the celebrated Bedford Springs mineral water. Many persons in this county are now using this great remedy and all speak in highest praise of its worth. We have given you in a previous article quite a history of this great remedy, and we propose now to speak of the action of water in general upon the human system, to be followed by articles more particularly of the action of mineral waters, and the celebrated Bedford water in particular, what this water cures, and in fact all the information that can be desired upon this important subject.

The analysis of the water recently made by Dr. Henry Leffman, Analytical Chemist and Expert, is full and complete, and shows that the medicinal agents contained therein remain about the same as when analyzed by Dr. Church, in 1825, so far as the quality and quantity of magnesia, soda, lime and iron are concerned. He, however, calls special attention to the high degree of organic purity of the Magnesia Spring. There is no evidence of nitrates or nitrites or any fixed organic matter. The water retains its qualities unchanged for a long period of time.

Next to sunlight and heat, water is the greatest life-giving force in all nature. Man has been known to exist for weeks and months without food, but could not survive long without water. The human body is made up of millions of cells and these cells must be filled by water in order to uphold the economy of the human system in an approximate normal condition. All the organs of the body are influenced, and their action is either increased or diminished, according to the amount of fluid in the cell tissues. The whole organism is at once affected by the quality and quantity of fluid imbibed.

Physiologists teach that 58.5 of the human body is composed of water

But none of his relatives believe that he was the murderer, and he has an innocent appearance and good character. We are still inclined to believe that one of the employees of Mr. LeConey did the foul deed and by various contrivances managed to cast suspicion on Mr. LeConey. But the searching scrutiny of a trial will likely result in revealing the truth.

The Descriptive Article Which Made the Name of Samuel Sullivan Cox Immortal.

While editor of the Ohio Statesman, at Columbus, Hon. S. S. Cox, wrote the following striking article, to which he owes his nickname of "Sunset Cox." For beauty of imagery and gorgeousness of word painting, it stands alone in its beauty:

What a stormful sunset was that of last night. How glorious the storm, and how splendid the setting of the sun! We do not remember ever to have seen the like on our round globe. The scene opened in the West, with a whole horizon full of a golden interpenetrating lustre, which colored the foliage and brightened every object in its own rich dyes. The colors grew deeper and richer, until the golden lustre was transformed into a storm cloud, full of finest lightning, which leaped in dazzling zigzags all round and over the city. The wind arose with fury, the slender shrubs and giant trees made obeisance to its majesty. Some even snapped before its force. The strawberry beds and grass plots "turned up their whites" to see Zephyrus march by. As the rain came, and the pools formed, and the gutters hurried away, thunder roared grandly, and the fire bells caught the excitement and rang with hearty chorus. The South and East received the copious showers, and the West all at once brightened up in a long polished belt of azure, worthy of a Sicilian sky. Presently a cloud appeared in the azure belt, in the form of a castellated city. It became more vivid, revealing strange forms of peerless fancies and alabaster temples, and glories, rare, and grand in this mundane sphere. It reminds us of Wordsworth's splendid verse in his Excursion:

"The appearance instantaneously disclosed Was of a mighty city, boldly gay A wilderness of buildings, sinking far, And self withdrawn into a wondrous depth, Far sinking into splendor without end."

But the city vanished only to give place to another isle, where the most beautiful forms of foliage appeared, imaging a paradise in the distant and purified air. The sun, wearied of elemental commotion, sank behind the green plains of the West. The "great eye in heaven," however, went not down without a dark brow hanging over its departing light. The rich flush of the unearthly light had passed and the rain had ceased, when the solemn church bells pealed, the laughter of children, out and joyous after the storm, is heard with the carol of birds; while the forked and purple weapon of the skies still darted illumination around the startling college, trying to rival its angles and leap into its dark windows. Candles are lighted. The piano strikes up. We feel that it is good to have a home—good to be on the earth where such revelations of beauty and power may be made. And as we cannot refrain from reminding our readers of everything wonderful in our city, we have begun and ended our feeble etching of a sunset which comes so rarely that its glory should be committed to immortal type.

"ALL WOOL AND A YARD WIDE."

When a great business house, of world-wide reputation for honesty, fair dealing and financial responsibility, feels warranted in attaching its certificate of guarantee to its goods, such action furnishes the best possible evidence that the products are believed to be just what they are represented to be. Such confidence on the part of manufacturers and vendors naturally begets confidence in purchasers, and hence it is that there has grown to be, all over this great country, such an unprecedented demand for, and such implicit confidence in, that most popular liver, blood and lung remedy known as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, as no other medicine has ever before met with. It is sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturer, that it will either benefit or cure in every case of disease for which it is recommended, or the money paid for it will be promptly refunded. It is manufactured by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., a well-known and financially solid business corporation. No other responsible manufacturers of medicines have put their remedies to such severe tests as to warrant them to give satisfaction, or refunded the money paid for them. "Golden Medical Discovery" cures "liver complaint," or biliousness, indigestion and dyspepsia, all humors or blood-taints, skin diseases, scrofulous sores and tumors and pulmonary consumption (which is only scrofula of the lungs) if taken in time and given a fair trial. Chronic catarrh in the head, bronchitis and throat diseases, are also cured by this most wonderful blood-purifier and invigorating tonic.

CLOTHES DON'T COUNT.

From the Boston Herald.

A sporting authority observes that the young man who appears at tournaments on the tennis ground draped with an elegant silk or satin sash of florid hue, twenty-four inches wide and forty-eight long, with cap and tie and blooming blazer, with shoes to match, cigar and shampooed, is not the man who wins the game or who makes it popular, manly and healthful. The dress of the real contestants in a great game is unpretentious and modest. A pair of white flannel trousers, a coarse linen cheviot shirt, a pair of light, inexpensive shoes, a straw hat or well-worn cap, and the attire of the tennis expert is complete. Their costumes are not attractive, but their playing is. It is a good deal the same in all the other walks of life, whether it be work or play. Clothes don't count.

PLENTY OF ROOM FOR ALL OF US.

The Size of Heaven, as Figured From the Bible.

A well known skillful accountant, of this city, has been doing some large figuring from a passage in the Bible concerning the size of Heaven. Here it is:

"And he measured the city with a reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal."—Rev. 21-16.

Twelve thousand furlongs equals 7,920,000 feet, which being cubed equals 496,793,083,000,000,000 cubic feet.

Half of this we will reserve for the Throne of God and the Court of Heaven, and half the balance for streets, leaving a remainder of 124,198,272,000,000,000 cubic feet.

Divide this by 4,096, the cubic feet in a room sixteen feet square, and there will be 30,321,843,750,000,000 rooms.

We will now suppose the world always did and always will contain 990,900,000 inhabitants, and that a generation lasts for 33 1/3 years, making in all 2,970,000,000 every century, and that the world will stand 100,000 years, or 1,000 centuries, making in all 2,970,000,000 inhabitants.

Then, suppose there were 100 worlds equal to this in number of inhabitants and duration of years, making a total of 297,000,000,000,000 persons, and there would be more than 100 rooms sixteen feet square for each person.

HERE is a summing up of the condition of affairs in the South from the New York Star, a rank Democratic paper: The outrages on colored people in the South multiply every day. The tearing from their beds and beating of innocent colored people in Georgia was noted a few days ago, and but one southern paper denounced the outrage. Within two weeks more than a hundred colored persons have been shot down in Mississippi because they belonged to a farmer's alliance—a co-operative association that gave the colored people the opportunity to buy their provisions cheaper than they could get them from the stores of the planters. In Louisiana, a few days ago, a colored man who had harbored a school teacher was taken from his bed, whipped and then killed, and his 15-year-old daughter had her throat cut from ear to ear by white "Regulators." The news to-day is that delegates returning from a colored Baptist convention were assaulted and driven out of the cars in Tennessee, because they had been discussing the best methods of promoting the welfare of their brethren. How long is this thing to last? The Southern people can answer that question.

Mr. E. Slattery, of Delhi, La., says her son 14 years of age, had a dreadful time with ulcers, sores and blotches which followed chicken pox. After using many remedies without benefit, she gave him Swift's Specific, which cured him sound and well.

We have sold S. S. S. since the first day we commenced the drug business, and have heard some wonderful reports of its effects. Many use it with best results to cure malaria from the system, and for blood poison, scrofula and such diseases it is without a rival.

COLERWOOD & CO., Monroe, La. Mr. W. A. Tibbs is a printer in the office of the Jackson, Miss. Clarion-Ledger. He says that three years ago he was a victim of bad blood, which deprived him of health and threatened serious consequences. He further says that he took S. S. S., and it cured him.

I have been subject to painful boils and carbuncles over my body during the spring season, and after much suffering and much useless doctoring I found a permanent cure in Swift's Specific. It is the monarch of blood medicines.

A New Emancipation.

Jim Robinson is telling a story around Toledo which is worth printing. Of course it is about electric street railways, but that doesn't hurt it. It seems that a northern company recently put in an electric road in Nashville, Tenn., and an old dandy was showing it to his wife. "Look at it! Look at it!" he said. "Bless the Lord, these Yankees are great people. Twenty-five years ago dey come down heah and freed the nigh-gah, and now dey come down and free de mule."—From the Toledo Blade.

PRESIDENT CAMPBELL of the Window-Glass Worker's Association, having piloted the association to victory, will now resign and go into the real-estate business. The same qualities that made him successful as a leader of one of the most intelligent and prosperous labor unions in the world will no doubt make him successful in his new vocation.

John T. Carroll, of Middletown, Conn., returned home the other day after an absence of four years, and discovered that his funeral had been held long ago and that a body supposed to be his, was resting in the churchyard.

AN APPEAL.

The following appeal from Conemaugh Valley, with indorsements from Dr. Higbee has been received, and will explain itself. It is signed by a committee of ten and is addressed to the superintendents and school boards of the State of Pennsylvania, and the benevolent and charitable people of our country in behalf of the schools and children in the flooded district of the Conemaugh Valley.

"WHEREAS, An appeal for aid for the 'Johnstown' schools has been sent throughout the State, we deem it but just and proper to all to say that this 'Johnstown' appeal refers to Johnstown borough only, and money sent in response to this will not be shared with other deserving and helpless districts. Hence our appeal for the children of the whole valley. To give you some idea of the helpless, and, unless this appeal is responded to, hopeless state of affairs, we mention the following facts:

"The formerly beautiful borough of Woodvale was entirely washed away, not one house remaining. Its splendid school building, books, and apparatus, to the value of $15,000 was obliterated. The bell is the only relic found. This district has a debt of $3,000 in outstanding bonds. All source of taxation is gone. There will be one hundred children to attend school in this district, if we can provide means to erect a temporary building and engage the services of a teacher. Last year they had four full rooms; this year they will try to do with one. Conemaugh borough school district lost its building, books and apparatus, to the value of $25,000. This district has a debt of $500, and three-fourths of its taxable property has been totally destroyed. Last year they had eight rooms filled with 480 pupils. This year they will try to maintain four schools, if they can possibly be kept open. Cambria borough school district lost buildings and property to the value of $5,000, and three-fifths of the taxable property has been swept away. There are here three hundred children to provide for. In these three boroughs there is neither house nor book with which to begin school, nor means of providing the same. There are other districts which have been badly crippled and injured. Many of the children of Johnstown borough have found homes in the districts surrounding and will have to be provided for. In Lower Yoder township alone there are 250 children from Johnstown and other flooded districts, and this burden cannot be borne by one district. The following additional districts have been badly injured: Millville, East Conemaugh, Franklin, East Taylor, Coopersdale, and South Fork.

"The world can see our extreme need of help. It is our last remedy. The State Superintendent has advised us to challenge the friends of education. We hope the appeal will not be in vain. He that giveth quickly giveth twice. Let each teacher and pupil do something for us. If we can tide over this winter we can get through. Believing the County Superintendent to be the proper person to receive and disburse this fund, we ask all contributions to be sent to J. W. Leech, Ebensburg, Pa., who, will we are satisfied, see that the money is fairly distributed to those districts needing and deserving help."

HARRISBURG, Sept. 2, 1889.

The suffering districts represented in this appeal certainly deserve the warmest sympathy of the public, and we urge upon all to give as large aid as possible, that the schools may be fully organized and put into operation. The interest is a most worthy one, the need of help unmistakable, and what we have said in approval of the appeal of Johnstown Borough, we here repeat in behalf of these districts. That there may be no misunderstanding in the application of what is given, all funds for the districts named in the appeal must be forwarded to J. W. Leech, Superintendent of Cambria County, who will make an equitable distribution of the same.

E. E. HIGBEE, Supt. Public Instruction.

—Here is another story that serves as a relic of the great Johnstown flood: Two days after the flood Mr. Richardson, a Pittsburgh attorney, was serving out clay pipes and tobacco, which some kind-hearted soul had sent out among the relief stores, when a young woman presented herself before him. The line, of course, had been made up of men, and Mr. Richardson asked the girl who was extremely pretty and refined in appearance, what she wanted with a pipe. She blushed and repeated her request. "Why, you don't smoke?" said Mr. Richardson. "No; but please give me a pipe." "If you will tell me what you will do with it I'll give you one." The girl hesitated, and then raising her hand to her bangs, which hung limp over her forehead, she said, "I want to curl these." She got the stem of a broken pipe and went away laughing. She had been rescued from the wreck at the bridge only twenty-four hours before, and was then almost on the verge of starvation, and when she sought the pipe to curl her bangs she was evidently badly in need of clothing.

State Notes Culled from Exchanges.
A pie-eating match took place in Conshohocken a few days ago, when the victor disposed of six pies.

A steer ran ahead of a locomotive a quarter of a mile on the Perkiomen railroad, at Etna, on Tuesday of last week, crossing a bridge in its flight and escaping safely.

Mrs. George H. Dansford, of Reading, died last Friday. While laughing heartily at a theatre performance her artificial teeth were missing, and a post mortem examination this evening developed the fact that she had swallowed them while laughing. They were found lodged in her stomach.

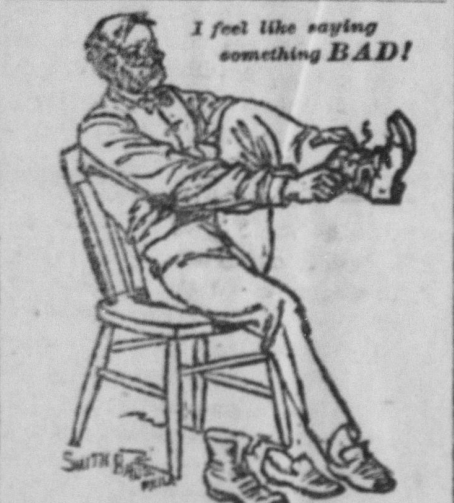

Three maiden ladies of Pleasant Unity have been robbed of a large sum of money by a man who was taken into their house, representing that he was a Johnstown sufferer.

The gang of thieves who have been committing depredations in the western part of Bedford county have all been brought to justice, seven of them having been convicted in the Court on Wednesday.

The Ancient Wells.

About eight miles from Williamsport, near the town of Warrensville, says the Jersey Shore Vidette, are three or four so-called "wells" on the top of a mountain. These wells are between ten and fifteen feet in diameter and go down to a depth that nobody knows. They have been explored several hundred feet by means of ropes and ladders. A rock hurled down from the lowest point ever reached by men can be heard rumbling away down as it seems thousands of feet. Skeletons of deer and other animals that have fallen in are found on the ledges of rock that jut out. They are dangerous pitfalls to strange hunters. What caused them is a mystery that has never yet been solved.

—At the council on Monday evening it was reported that there is very little disorder in town and no arrests at all. On Monday we saw at least six cases of bad conduct and considerable disorder; if the police don't care to arrest these drunken men they should at least manage to compel them to leave the pavements where ladies find it very disagreeable to pass.

IN OLD FORT WOODS.

THE CITY OF TENTS WHICH MEANS
PEACE, THRIFT AND PROSPER-ITY.

Perhaps Forty Thousand People will be present.

OPENING CEREMONIES TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

SCENES AND INCIDENTS OF THE GATHERING.

Monday was the day before the picnic. Yet the Fort Woods resembled the rendezvous of an army. A peaceful army it was. The series of tastefully arranged tents were like great symbols of flags of truce; the figures moving hither and thither were not armed cap-a-pie, neither did they look fierce and forbidding. There was an earnest purpose in each countenance, there was design in every movement. Business, pleasure, profit are evidently the watch words—the open sesame which has realized the vast picnic enterprise of to-day, which will be opened formally this afternoon, by Col. I. S. Frain, the master of the county grange. Then the committee having the arrangements in charge will transfer the picnic to the county Grange and the greatest picnic Centre county or Central Pennsylvania has ever seen will be an actual event.

TENTS, TENTS, TENTS.

The cluster of tents number 172; of these 148 are taken by private parties and 24 by exhibitors. The cry for more tents is pressing and loud and we trust will be acceded to. Better than ever before are the boarding house accommodations and this is fortunate, because on Monday, while the affair was yet in embryo fully eighty persons dined at the hospitable home of the Keller Brothers, and all say that as "Mine Hosts" these gentlemen are worth a whole Fifth Avenue bakery. There was a scene of on Monday as picnickers, of both sexes were completing the arrangements. The drizzling rain did not even make them look anxious. The grove is in such excellent condition and presents so much the comforts of home that it is pleasant there under any conditions. Hon. Leonard Rhone was among the most active spirits present and even Capt. Boal could survey the result of his arrangement with pleasure and equanimity. Among the exhibitions are almost as many from a distance as at home.

ELABORATE EXHIBITS

are seen in the pavilion occupied by Shannon & Son, of Philadelphia. They show the ne plus ultra of agricultural ingenuity. There is variety in Thornton Brothers' exhibit, also of the Quaker City, in their display of all sorts of groceries. Indeed Philadelphia has taken a decided interest in the affair and Gartry, Marson & Allison display clothing. Beautifully decorated tents are those of Garman & Son of Bellefonte and William Best of Lancaster. McQuestion is on hand with buggies and carriages.

Besides the special Temple Museum of curiosities in which at least six separate and distinct marvels are seen there are also two unique home productions—a five-legged calf and a six-legged pig—both of the latter being brought here from Philadelphia. A dancing platform has been erected by Mr. Aikie where the terpsichorean art will be assiduously cultivated by rural lads and lassies and well as by city beaux and belles. "Take your pictures?" asks one of a dozen or more of the thoughtful photographic artists who are scattered over the ground and who are anxious to preserve the shadow ere the substance fades.

On Monday Mr. Musser, of Aaronburg, had his exhibit of implements and Burkholder, of Centre Hall, is equal to the best in the same line. Mr. Waite's exhibit will do splendid credit to Bellefonte's business enterprise.

NOTES CAPTIVE WHILE NAPPING.

The sanitary arrangements are thorough and excellent.

Some folks are sufficiently enthusiastic to predict an attendance of 40,000 if the weather becomes fine.

John Sonbeck and Howard Barnes are present and, as usual, making themselves useful.

Israel Hoover, of Unionville, and Capt. Hunter, of Stormtown, are on hand and may be appealed to by persons who want information on the subject of picnics.

NIGHT AND MORNING.

What a gloomy night was that of Monday on the picnic grounds. Rain began at 7 and continued until 11. But picnic spirits were not all depressed, because there was singing and shouting (I do not say music) all night. At least one amusing remark was heard at 10 o'clock. It was in a tent occupied by two maiden ladies. One of them exclaimed: "Oh Heavens! Sarah! There is a man under the bed! A real live man!" Then came the exclamation from the other: "For goodness sake don't make so much noise or you will scare him away." Sundry shouts were heard during the night, such as "Good night!" "Go to Sleep!" etc. A party passed who were blowing to the extent of their powers on mouth organs, and, in brief, there was a conglomeration of noises. It was not easy to sleep amid the music of volunteer glee clubs and self-constituted harmonica orchestra.

Some of the refreshment stands were in operation all night and had patrons, but that is enough—"Good night!"

Of course, there were only a few arrivals from Bellefonte this (Tuesday) morning. As our reporter went the rounds he found a party of boys who were acquiring an appetite for breakfast by holding out weights. One was successful in holding out a 20 pound weight one minute and another who vowed that he would equally well hold out 1 ounce for five minutes. The greeting which Superintendent Arney gave me this morning was a damp one. As he stopped to shake hands about a pint of water from his umbrella went slowly trickling down the back of our neck. So his remark that it is wet was extremely apropos. Though disappointment is indicated on countenances this morning all hope for an improvement.

Our correspondent is under obligations to the Messrs. Keller for favors rendered.

Though, of course the grounds are wet, the situation is not so bad as many suppose.

A Mr. Teller who is assisting the Messrs. Keller, is exceedingly popular and efficient.

Mr. Vonada and family, of Northumberland, arrived this morning.

Mrs. Cherry, of Bellefonte, is the proprietress of one of the picnic boarding houses.

Gov. Beaver will be here on Friday if possible.

Hol for the Grangers picnic: Everyone and all their friends:

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Meek and Mr. Rhoads, of Houtzdale, spent several days in this vicinity during the past week.

Messrs. N. C. Campbell and J. L. Carter returned from Gettysburg the other day. They seemed to have enjoyed the trip hugely, however. They think Gettysburg is a rather moist country.

Miss Morrison, of England, has been a guest at the residence of Mr. Ewing for some time.

Miss Breon, of Union County, spent last week with her friend Miss Annie Bowersox, of this place.

Mrs. J. B. Williams, of Tyrone, arrived for the purpose of visiting a few days with her many friends at this place, and to attend the picnic.

Messrs. J. M. Campbell and J. W. Bailey, of this place, are now students at State College, where they will spend what they hope to be a profitable year.

Miss Blanch Meek, of this place, has gone to Houtzdale, with the expectation of teaching during the winter.

The party goes of Fairbrook were well entertained by the Rev. J. C. Young. Although Rev. Young is unmarried they say he can make good ice cream and serve it in grand style.

The singing school at this place, instructed by Prof. J. A. Weaver, is moving along quite nicely thus far. Everyone seemed to be interested as was shown by the attendance such a disagreeably inclement evening as that of last Friday.

Farewell, sliced cucumber,

But you've caused many a restless slumber
And many a vacant pew.

Patrons' Pleasures.

Another Day Spent on the Picnic Ground at Fort Woods.

THE EVENT FORMALLY OPENED WITH INTERESTING EXERCISES.

TO BE CONTINUED THROUGH NEXT SATURDAY.

CHANGES WHICH A DAY OF SUNSHINE WILL EFFECT.

Corporal Musser, who went to the South to attend a military gathering, is at home again. So is C. P. Stoneroda, who accompanied him in the trip, and both gentlemen are on the picnic ground. The Merry-go-round was erected on Tuesday and to-day is going around in a decidedly merry manner. As the rain of Tuesday made that day a dies non so far as a picnic is concerned it will certainly be continued through Saturday and possibly through Sunday with religious exercises.

A VISIT TO MR. KELLER'S RESIDENCE.

Tuesday was as pleasant elsewhere as on the picnic ground and so we took advantage of the quiet which reigned supreme and took a ride down the pike toward Spring Mills, about two miles east of the woods. It appears that Mr. D. C. Keller, one of the gentlemen proprietors of the picnic boarding house, was also away from the ground procuring supplies and we met at his farm residence. We availed ourselves of an invitation to enter and inspect it and as the readers of the News like to read of handsome things we will tell them what we saw.

The residence was modeled after his own plans and presents a beautiful and pleasing exterior. The level and extended lawn sweeps beautifully down from the house in a southern direction. The porch, which extends around the south and west sides is eight feet in width. The hall at the entrance is almost equal in dimensions, being seven feet wide. This hallway communicates with both the parlor and sitting room, which are admirably proportioned apartments. The dining room—that important and pleasant part of every house—may be entered from the parlor through folding doors. These rooms are north of the main entrance while the sitting room is south. The kitchen is large and spacious as all kitchens should be. The stairs are so roomy and easy of ascent that they unconsciously invite the visitor to mount to the upper story, where are apartments all nicely finished in yellow pine and as smooth and polished as marble. Clothes presses, closets and cupboards are numerous.

Mechanics praise the arrangement and say that there is a most perfect utilization of space throughout the building—there being not a particle of waste room. The carpenter work on the building reflects the skill of the Hagan Brothers who had it in charge. The painters, who may also be proud of their work, were J. T. Lee and Frank Arney.

A strip of pretty woods behind the house gives it an artistic appearance, while the land that rolls away from it, both west and north, is the finest in that valley. Not only does this property represent any expenditure of taste and money, but it is also the product of its owner's unremitting toil, as the entire property shows a degree of perfection which is seldom attained. We congratulate Mr. Keller.

Pardon this digression in a picnic report.

HAPPY WEDNESDAY MORNING.

While people slept on Tuesday night with the drenching rain coming down in torrents, a change came over the spirit of their dreams. The sky cleared, the air cooled and this morning every one is correspondingly jubilant.

Col. R. H. Thomas, the successful manager of Williams Grove picnic, is on the ground and doubtless can gain a few pointers of value. Mortimer Whitehead, another eminent granger, is expected.

If Mr. Rhone was feeling depressed on Tuesday he is all right to-day.

The erection of the merry-go-round was completed on Tuesday and it was filled with people in the evening who made the circle carrying umbrellas.

Fred Kuria, Jr., left the picnic grounds for Bellefonte to attend the hop.

As soon as Will Garman retired for the night the rain ceased.

The air cooled so suddenly that Heeh Leyman, of Roland, who arrived without his overcoat, only managed to murmur through his chattering teeth that he believed he would freeze before dinner time.

The Tusseyville band is here and he several tons of music ready to let loose.

The Temple museum is worth inspecting and a novelty meriting special mention is the sword dancer.

Mr. Teller, father of James Teller, has arrived and expects to enjoy himself as well as make himself useful.

Mr. Abe Meisell, of Buffalo X. Roads, Union county, is a host in himself and

A NEW DEPARTURE.

SAID Uncle Sam: "I will be wise, And thus the Indian civilize: Instead of guns that kill a mile, Tobacco, lead and liquor vile, Instead of serving out a meal, Or sending Agents out to steal, I'll give domestic arts to teach, A cake of 'IVORY SOAP' to each. Before it flies the guilty stain,

The grease and dirt no more remain; 'Twill change their nature day by day, And wash their darkest blots away. They'll turn their bows to fishing-rods, And bury hatchets under sods, In wisdom and in worth increase, And ever smoke the pipe of peace; For ignorance can never cope With such a foe as 'IVORY SOAP'."

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory'"; they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

the picnic will be merry while he remains.

The programme of opening the picnic which the rain of Tuesday prevented, will take place to-day.

Capt. Hunter, of Half Moon, is confident that the weather will be pleasant from now on.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" is there, and Uncle Tom says he seriously contemplates making it his permanent stopping place.

Half-Rates to Columbus for the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, will convene at Columbus, Ohio, September 16th to 22d. This meeting will undoubtedly bring together the largest assemblage of the order ever before gathered on a similar occasion. It is expected that 15,000 members, including a large number of Patriarchs Militant, will be in attendance. The parade and public ceremonies which will extend through the week will be highly interesting to the public as well as to members of the order. For this occasion the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets from all principal stations on its lines east of Pittsburgh and Erie (except New York), September 18th to 19th, valid for return until September 25th, 1889, at the rate of a single fare for the round trip.

The universally admitted superiority of the Pennsylvania Railroad's great system of trains, equipped with coaches, sleeping and dining cars, affording every convenience to the traveler, commends this route to the favorable consideration of visitors.

Literary Notes from the Century Co.

The publishers of S. N. Nichols announce that that popular children's magazine is to be enlarged, beginning with the new volume, which opens with November, 1889, and that a new and classic type will be adopted. Four important serial stories by four well-known American authors will be given during the coming year.

MAGAZINE NOTE.—Dr. W. W. Keen, the distinguished Philadelphia surgeon, will contribute to HANCOCK'S MAGAZINE for October a paper upon "Recent Progress in Surgery," in which he points out the astonishing advance in this department of medicine. He maintains that "America can rightly boast of playing the chief role in effecting the change that has taken place."

—Oh, this equinoctial storm,
How it discouraged our plan;
How it made us all to mourn
As it fell on the Granger man;
Of all the sights so saddening
Of all that caused us grief;
A Granger picnic is the rain
Can take its place as chief.

It's oozy and sneaky on the ground,
The tents run down to rain;
We wade through mire up to our knees—
For comfort search in vain
It makes us feel lugubrious
Too utterly too too,
And we'll punch the head of the man
Who says: "Does it rain enough for you?"

WHAT A WOMAN CAN DO.

She Has Some Accomplishments Beyond the Power of Man.

That there are some desirable things that a woman can do the Boston Times admits and cites some examples. Here are some of them:

She can come to a conclusion without the slightest trouble of reasoning on it, and no sane man can do that.

Six of them can talk at once and get along first rate, and no two men can do that.

She can safely stick fifty pins in her dress while he is getting one under his thumb-nail.

She is cool as a cucumber in a half dozen tight dresses and skirts, while a man will sweat and fume and growl in one loose shirt.

She can talk as sweet as peaches and cream to the woman she hates while two men would be punching each other's head before they had exchanged ten words.

She can throw a stone with a curve that would be a fortune to a baseball pitcher.

She can say "no" in such a low voice that it means "yes."

She can sharpen a lead pencil if you give her plenty of time and plenty of pencils.

She can dance all night in a pair of shoes two sizes too small for her and enjoy every minute of the time.

She can appreciate a kiss from her husband seventy years after the marriage ceremony is performed.

She can go to church and afterward tell you what every woman in the congregation had on, and in some rare instances can give you some faint idea of what the text was.

She can walk half the night with a colicky baby in her arms without once expressing a desire of murdering the infant.

She can do more in a minute than a man can do in an hour, and do it better.

She can drive a man crazy in twenty-four hours and then bring him to paradise in two seconds by simply tickling him under the chin, and there does not live that mortal son of Adam's misery who can do it.

A bull snake 17 feet long and 14 inches in diameter has been seen near Gridley, Col. It has frightened several teams of horses that saw it sunning itself along the main highway.

The school teachers of Montgomery county, Ind., assembled in convention last week and solemnly resolved that the gum chewing habit was unbecoming to members of the profession.

A Troy shirt man predicts that in less than ten years there will be a general return to the old-shirt which buttoned in front, and from which at least one button was missing after every wash.

SOMETHING NEW.

The first number of what promises to be the handsomest and most interesting illustrated weekly journal in the United States will soon be issued, at Portland, Oregon. When we think that in the popular realm there is the Allegheny mountains and the Missouri river there is not a single illustrated weekly, it seems somewhat strange to hear that such a paper is to be published in what we have been accustomed to consider "far off" Oregon.

But Oregon is far off no longer, and in no respect is she behind her sister states of the east; indeed, it would seem from this announcement that she is a step in advance of most of them. We certainly look for something of great interest, and we certainly look for something of great value to those who have an interest in the northwest and its progress. —The sociable of the Milesburg Presbyterian church was held at the residence of Simon Nyhart on Thursday evening last and was a particularly pleasing occasion.

—Be sure to read the suggestions made to base ball admirers by the Philadelphia railroad. If the idea could be carried out next season the result, we believe, would be excellent.

—Dr. W. A. Jacobs, the well known physician at Centre Hall, is exceedingly busy just at present. Among his patients are several who have mild cases of diphtheria. The patients afflicted with diphtheria reside in the country, not in Centre Hall.

—The column and a half of stuff which the Centre Democrat devotes to Guyer Mattern is entirely wasted as there is no man in the county more pious than Guyer Mattern. Guyer is not a man who cannot stand defeat.

—Mr. William Snyder, who resides near Centre Hall, is suffering from the effects of a badly lacerated right hand. He had a drill, the end of which was battered and ragged. In throwing it from his hand it caught in the flesh, producing the unfortunate result described.

—It is stated that school districts failing to advertise an annual statement of their finances will forfeit the amount of their State appropriation if the fact is brought to the attention of the State superintendent. Fabrication can be made either by hand bills or in the county newspaper.

—A large number of the people of Blair county—a prominent mover among whom is Rev. D. S. Monroe, D. D.—have called a convention, the object of which they state is entirely distinct from politics, but which they declare to be to vote for and elect only such men as are openly and uncompromisingly in favor of temperance.

THAT GREAT GAME.

The "Centre Fielder who Fell" Gives His Opinion of the Game and Offers Excellent Suggestions.

To the Editor,

Bellefonte Daily News.
Sir: Enclosed find remittance for which send me a few copies of your paper, issue of Friday, Aug 30th, which gives such a humorous account of the base ball game that the Penna. R. R. club of Philadelphia, played with the Bellefonte club.

Your dramatic portrayal of (me) "the Railroad Centre Fielder," who with a happy smile was in the act of catching the sphere as it was beautifully coming down, down, down, from the sunlit dome and just as he made his last step in reaching for the fly—a hole—a circus ring—and "Oh! what a fall was there my countrymen." The description was too much for the boys; some are laughing yet. Yes, it's too good to miss so they must have a copy of it.

The Railroad boys are infatuated with the city and the friends of base ball of Bellefonte and when they make their annual tour next August they will by all means come to Bellefonte where they hope to find the treacherous grounds in better condition; and where they intend retrieving themselves from the miserable exhibition they made of base ball playing.

The Rail Roaders believe the 35 miles Tally Ho ride from Lewistown to Bellefonte and going immediately from the coach to the ball ground and then playing, was unwise as they did not have a proper interval of rest from an eight hours enjoyable ride. Next year this will be avoided and Bellefonte can look for a good game.

The Penna. R. R. Club have played four games on their trip, winning three and losing one. At Lewistown it was a stubbornly fought contest up to the seventh inning when the railroaders kept the bases full and the Lewistown players became nervous which gave the Pennsylvania a good lead. Although the Lewistown recovered themselves in the 8th and 9th inning the Railroaders won by a score of 9 to 4. At Bellefonte the Railroaders were simply annihilated, the Bellefonte club taking them to camp to the tune of 21 to 7. At Renovo the Pennsylvania club played a nip and tuck game until the 9th inning, the score standing 1 to 0 in favor of Pennsylvania. In the 9th however a timely hit gave them 2 runs. The Renovos were shut out and the P. R. won by the score of 3 to 0. At Williamsport they played a good fielding game and defeated the Williamsport by a score of 9 to 2. The showing made by the Railroaders has been satisfactory to their friends and fellow clerks at home.

Judging by the attendance at the Bellefonte game there seems to be interest enough in base ball to justify the formation of a Bellefonte Athletic Association where base ball, cricket, foot ball, lawn tennis, running and other outdoor sports could be indulged in. Memberships could be solicited from the admirers of athletic sports in the city of Bellefonte. The present grounds could be improved at a small cost. A club house could be erected also a grand stand. When anything special was going on, an admittance fee could be charged, the members of course being free. This seems to be what's wanted in Bellefonte and if but dozen so disposed would act at once there would be no difficulty in organizing a Bellefonte Athletic Association.

Respectfully,
"THE CENTRE FIELDER WHO 'FELL'."

A Train's Speed.
Inquiry is frequently made as to how the speed of a train may be estimated. The traveler is curious about the speed his train is making, and we suggest three methods by which the speed may be guessed with remarkable accuracy, as follows:

1. Watch for the passage of the train by the large white mile posts with black figures upon them, and divide 3,600 by the time in seconds between posts; the result is the speed in miles per hour.

2. Listen attentively until the ear distinguishes the click, click of the wheel as it passes a rail joint. The number of clicks upon one side of the car in twenty seconds is the speed in miles per hour, where the rails are thirty feet in length, and this is the case generally.

3. Count the number of telegraph poles passed in two minutes, if there are four or five wires to a pole, and in two minutes and twenty seconds if there are only one or two lines to a pole; the number of miles per hour at which the train is traveling.—Household.

Some Thieving Operations.
There are thieves in this community and they are committing their depredations on persons who are in a measure defenseless. An instance of this occurred the other day. Thieves, who are supposed to be young fellows about town entered some of the houses occupied by Finlanders working for McCalmonts. In one house they stole a watch. It happened that the Finlander caught the man who had the watch, but he was "smart" enough to persuade them to pay him $2 for returning it to them.

The Finlanders cannot speak English sufficiently well to describe the thief, but we heard a responsible gentleman say this morning that he is willing to give $25 for the fellows who took the watch or any other article. It will not be well for the fellows to commit another similar crime in that vicinity as they are being watched.

PRAISING STATE SOLDIER.

Colonel Carpenter, who commanded the Regulars who were in summer camp and united in military evolutions with the National Guard of Pennsylvania at Mount Gretna, near Lebanon, has completed his general report to the commanding officer of the Military Department. In that interesting document he recommends that the government accept the offer of Robert Coleman to make arrangements at Mount Gretna for a summer camp and artillery target practice.

The artillery range of 4,000 yards proposed by Mr. Coleman, Col. Carpenter says, would be the finest in the entire Eastern Division, and for accessibility, topographic advantages and healthiness of air, water, and surroundings would have no superior anywhere in the country. The Mount Gretna camp ground already has a range of 2,000 yards, which is equal to anything the government can command at present. The 4,000 yard range will therefore afford exceptional facilities for target practice with improved modern field guns.

Colonel Carpenter says that the ground is also admirably diversified topographically for battery and cavalry drill, it being sufficiently uneven to test the tactical efficiency and horsemanship of the battery riders and troopers of the squadron. He will therefore urge the acceptance of the offer, so that the improvements may be completed in time for the next season of military camps.

Colonel Carpenter also says that the Pennsylvania National Guard, representing the three arms of the service, judged by the practical experience of joint maneuvers in the field, present the highest type of the American citizen soldiery and with all the characteristics of regulars. He says as a rule the citizen soldiers have an amateurish indecision in their movements, which wears off with professional training and service, but the distinction is so slight in the case of the Pennsylvania National Guard that it would hardly be noticeable even to the practiced eye of a professional soldier.

He is of the opinion that there should be formed in each brigade a school for company officers and non-commissioned officers in the cavalry and artillery. He found as a curious fact that many of the men did not understand the calls of command as given by the bugle, and had to wait for the command as verbally given by the officers. The camp was good, though, and was probably of importance to the guard.

Rhoads-Rodgers.
On Tuesday evening a very delightful wedding occurred in this place and one which is so pleasing in every particular that we feel inclined to express congratulations before proceeding further. At the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Rodgers, their eldest daughter, Miss Maggie C. Rodgers, was married to Mr. Robert A. Rhoads, of Altoona, Rev. Wm. Laurie, D.D., officiating.

The bride was recently one of the capable young ladies in the Telephone Exchange. She is a young lady of much worth and excellence and of a bright Christian character. Words of equal high praise can be used in reference to the groom. Until recently, he was a resident of Bellefonte and is very favorably known here. We extend to the happy couple our most earnest wishes that their pathway through life may have in it all the prosperity they so richly deserve.

Wedded in Altoona.
We are glad to accede to a request to publish the following from this morning's Altoona Tribune:

Last evening, at the home of F. S. Musser, 820 Third avenue, at 7.30 o'clock, Mr. Charles B. Rudy and Miss Alma C. Musser, both of Altoona were united in marriage by Rev. Charles T. Aikens, of Pine Grove Mills. Mr. R. C. Musser and Miss Hattie Meek officiated in the capacity of groomsmen and bridesmaids. The occasion was a joyous one, and after hearty congratulations had been given the young couple a rich repast was enjoyed by all present. Mr. and Mrs. Rudy left on Philadelphia express for the east where they will spend their honeymoon. The best wishes of their many friends will ever be with them.

Tally One for Milesburg.
Milesburg already has its bear excitement. Two young men from Bellefonte were in that vicinity on Tuesday of this week and dispatched a coon and a squirrel. They saw two bears, but were too much afraid of the fierce looking animal to shoot, and they hastened away.

Later on a man named Schupp (the famous Bill Schupp, we suppose) tracked one of the bears to his lair and killed it making the first bear of the season which has been killed in this vicinity.

—They had a little anarchism down at Karthaus the other night. A Frenchman named August Marti, from Hontzdale, endeavored to organize a band of outlaw anarchists. Several buildings were to be fired and the lives of a few prominent citizens taken, but the officers of the law in that neighborhood nipped their outlaw work in the bud by guarding the town, and thus prevented wholesale destruction.

Enforcing the Brooks law in Huntingdon County.

Among persons arrested in Huntingdon county for alleged violations of the Brooks High License Law were John Smith, junior, member of the drug firm of S. S. Smith & Son, and Dr. G. D. Ballantyne, a practicing physician. The case against Smith was tried this week. He was defended by Hon. R. M. Speer and District Attorney Orady conducted the prosecution.

A correspondent to the Altoona Tribune says that a motion was early made by the defense to quash the indictment. The Court overruled the motion and granted an exception for the defense. The indictment contained two charges against Mr. Smith. First, for selling liquor without a license and, second, for selling liquor to men of known intemperate habits. A number of witnesses of intemperate reputation were called by the Commonwealth and testified that they had on innumerable occasions procured whiskey, alcohol and other intoxicating liquors from the defendant on the prescription of Dr. Ballantyne. One witness testified that he had twice obtained liquor there without a prescription.

Attorney Orady thereupon called for the prescriptions and on examination it was found that many of the prescriptions bearing Dr. Ballantyne's name had been written on printed blanks containing the doctor's printed signature and also the business card of S. S. Smith & Son. At the bottom of the blank was also printed the following, which the person obtaining the prescription was to sign: "I hereby affirm that this material is to be used for medicinal purposes and shall not be used as a beverage." It was sworn by the prosecution that about five hundred or more of these prescription blanks had been used; that they had been conceived and drafted by Dr. Ballantyne and printed at the expense of Dr. Smith. The doctor, who appeared as a witness for the defendant, stated that the special clause at the foot of the blank had been put there for his and the druggist's protection. Many of the prescriptions had been written by the doctor in Smith's drug store and others on the street and at his office. These prescriptions, one of the witnesses testified, would not be honored by any other local druggist than Mr. Smith.

Druggist Smith and the doctor were the only witnesses examined on the part of the defense. After arguments by counsel on either side Judge Furest charged the jury, in which he laid special emphasis on the definition of the word "prescription" as applied to the act of a physician in prescribing liquor. He also tersely elucidated to the jury the various provisions of the Brooks law bearing specially to the case on trial. The jury retired at 12.30 o'clock and after being out four hours returned with a verdict of "guilty." The minimum penalty that can be imposed on Druggist Smith is a $500 fine and an imprisonment of three months. There are other cases awaiting trial of alleged illegal liquor selling besides those of the elder Smith and Dr. Ballantyne.

Barn Burners.
During the past two weeks in Juniata county, four barns, situated within a quarter of a mile of each other, have been burned. The first was that of Samuel Sells. Last Friday morning the barn of David Hetrick was burned, together with nine horses, some cattle, farm machinery and grain. On Sunday morning the barn of William, Edward and Robert Kauffman followed, and on Tuesday evening the barn of Matthew Rodgers was totally consumed.

There seems to be a "Jack the Burner" at work about five miles from Millville, where the barn burning district is situated. After the burning of the Kauffman property, Mr. Rodgers received an anonymous note saying that his barn would come next. He took all precautions by hiring a watchman to guard his building constantly, but on Tuesday evening while the watchman was at supper, after he had been absent only a short time, Mr. Rodgers' barn was discovered in flames. The fiend had accomplished his work of destruction most skillfully, and though he was reported to have been seen and shot at by a neighbor, he escaped capture.

Detectives are now working on the case, and a reward of $500 is offered for the capture of the party or parties who have been guilty of the incendiarism. The people of Juniata county are greatly incensed at the persecution, and if they should catch the fiend at work they would probably throw him into the flames.

A Successful Celebration at Gettysburg.
Mr. A. V. Smith's report of the grand celebration which the soldiers have been enjoying at Gettysburg is decidedly the most enthusiastic we have heard. He regards the entire celebration as a decided success, there not being a flaw in its management. The accommodations were abundant and cheap, except on and after Tuesday. But the weather was fine and if people could not get first class indoor accommodations during that time the deprivation was not a serious one. The newspapers report a heavy storm there on Wednesday, but Mr. Smith says the day was fine. Good meals could be procured for twenty-five cents each and comfortable lodging for the same price and the veterans could not expect anything cheaper than that, the entire expense not averaging over $1 per day. The people of Gettysburg seem to have been especially solicitous for the comfort of their soldier guests and threw open the court house and school houses for their entertainment and accommodation.

A Great Shame.

Rev. Beaumont, of the Evangelical church of Spring Mills, will leave for Oregon in the course of a month. Rev. Beaumont, in obedience to the order of his conference, took an active part in laboring for the cause of prohibition, previous to the election of last June, and now some of his members, who took offense at his advocacy of prohibitory temperance, have withheld their support, the result of which he must leave or suffer for the want of the necessities of life. Shame! when God's servant must suffer for doing what God's word requires, and what their church demanded that they should do. X.

The above is from the Centre Democrat. If it is true we do not hesitate to say that the individuals thus persecuting Rev. Beaumont should have their names stricken from the list of church members, as they are wearing the robe of Christianity while they are serving the Devil.

The game of base ball played on Thursday afternoon bore the familiar title Manufacturers vs. Lawyers, and was No. 3 of the series for this season. The two nines were not composed exactly, however, of the same persons that composed them on former occasions. We looked at it only a short time, and certainly while we were there Mr. White man did the best playing, taking several very difficult plays without an error. For the Manufacturers Malcolm Laurie and Robert McKnight were the battery and for the Lawyers that very responsible position was taken by Charley Kurtz and Harry Quigley. The game was excellent all through, and much enjoyed, even if the somewhat formidable score of 19 to 6 in favor of the Manufacturers was the result.

All the new Woollens for the coming season now being received—Liberal discount for early orders during the dull season. Our full stock will be the finest we have ever shown—Price and a good fit guaranteed.

—A tramp recently called at an Oil City blacksmith shop, frankly asked the price of a drink, was given twenty-five cents, returned shortly with fifteen cents change and disappeared without waiting for commendation of his conduct.

—What terrible deaths are caused by electric wires! The worst of which we have read was that of an Italian who was killed by the wires in New York last week while suspended in mid air in falling he had caught the wire and could not release his hold.

A VISITOR FROM THE WEST.

Now Sojourning in Snow Shoe—Changes, Improvements and Personalities in that Lofty Town.

Mr. P. L. Budinger, a prominent business man of Los Angeles, Cal., with his wife and baby are guests at the residence of his brother, T. B. Budinger, who had not seen him since he went west thirteen years ago. Mr. Budinger left Los Angeles on August 14, stopped off two days in San Francisco, one day at Manitau Springs, one day in Denver, two days in Kansas City, two days in Quincy, Ill.; two days in Chicago, and nine days visiting friends in Cincinnati, and arrived in Snow Shoe Tuesday at noon. He thought to take his brother, T. B. B., by surprise and represent himself to be a drummer and sell him a bill of goods. But the Snow Shoe merchant caught on to the racket upon opening his mail box last Monday, found some letters addressed to P. L. Budinger from the latter's business manager, and was not as much surprised as his brother from the West who wondered why in the world his friends were looking for him.

The Snow Shoe School Board met about a week ago and elected the following teachers to teach the several schools of our township: The Grammar School, Miss Hannah Smith; the Primary, Miss Mollie Bing; the Fountain School, Miss Maggie Smith; the Sugar Camp School, Miss Maggie Reagan; the Cato School, Fred Howard; the Star School, Mr. Musser; the Moshannon School, Mr. DeLong; Holt School, Miss Bertha Leathers. The directors are to be congratulated on making such an excellent selection of teachers.

Miss Maggie Roth has returned home again from Northumberland, Pa. She was accompanied by Miss Nellie Voris and Miss Lin Holly, two of Northumberland's fascinating young ladies, who intend to spend several weeks in our mountain town.

Mr. M. P. Bock, superintendent of Beecher & Sober's lumber establishment at Gorton Heights, has moved his family to Philipsburg, where his children will have a better opportunity to attend school. Mr. Bock will reside at Philipsburg, but will continue to manage the lumber business at Gorton Heights.

Mrs. Gus Bechtel visited her friends at Karthaus last week.

We notice that Mr. Jacob Harnish has just finished repairing his residence, and that Father Cole is building a new addition to St. Mary's Catholic church, also that Mrs. Hettie Thompson has her new house almost completed.

Mr. Jacob Temple, of Florence, S. C., is visiting his uncle, Wm. Temple, and other relatives at Snow Shoe. He reports business improving very much in the South under little Ben's administration.

Mr. James McMullen, who is a brakeman on the Bellefonte and Snow Shoe passenger train, unfortunately lost his pocket book last Thursday, containing $40 in cash and many valuable papers. It was found on Friday by Mr. Cal. Bownell, who returned it to the owner with money and papers untouched.

The coal operators in this locality have considerable difficulty to obtain empty cars, as it seems so many more are required in the hard coal regions at this season of the year. Lack of empty cars makes it impossible for the operators to fill their orders promptly.

Mr. Loyd Culver and wife, who spent the summer in Snow Shoe, left for their home in York State last week. Mr. Culver likes a good joke and he can, with the least provocation, smile the broadest smile and laugh louder than any man we ever met.

The M. E. Sunday-school held their annual picnic in Rankin's grove last Thursday. The children had a very pleasant time and lots of good things to eat. The Rev. Mr. Ebersol, T. B. Budinger and the jolly fat man from Los Angeles, Cal., entertained the ladies.

Messrs. Wm. Stewart, Finley Stewart and Hamilton Bates left on Monday afternoon for Washington Territory, where they intend to engage in the lumber business.

What People are Doing.

Mr. William Dale, of Benner township, is a delegate to the United Brethren conference which meets in Altoona this week. Mr. Dale will make a prominent and influential delegate. We hear that an effort will be made to secure the return to this conference of Rev. Benjamin Hummill, who, while he was in this county, did excellent work for the church. Rev. Mr. Hummill is now at Fallen Timber, Huntingdon county.

Samuel J. Dale is an excellent farmer and farming is evidently his favorite occupation. In short, he will do farm work under any circumstances and we have even seen him plowing in his bare feet.

How the Country Prospers.

A competent judge who takes an unprejudiced review of the situation at present gives it as his opinion that labor is almost everywhere more fully employed now than usual, and at wages better than have been paid for two years past. The kinds of manufacture in which there has been no improvement are conspicuously exceptional. Even in the woolen manufacture it is safe to infer from sales of material and prices paid that more goods are being made and more hands are at work than a year ago. Farming has been prosperous, the rapid development of the South continues, and building in most of the cities gives evidence of industrial progress, and of a greater demand for comfortable homes. All these things mean that those who complain on account of hard times, whether reasonably or unreasonably, are just now in the minority.

Picnic Pickups.

Everybody will have hayseed in their hair this week.

It will be a fine opportunity for statesmen to tell what they don't know about farming.

Set you ten to one that all the candidates will go to the picnic.

The prohibitionists meet at the same time the Grangers do, which may detract from the size of the Prohibition convention.

Unless there are some pumpkins and potatoes displayed which will excel those which the Kansans are boasting so much about our Granger friends must redouble their efforts to achieve great results next year.

We hope the young gentlemen from the other parts of the county will be on their guard. Bellefonte's pretty maidens are going to make a raid on them at the picnic and expect to capture the game easily.

Hope the weather will be favorable. Look for your acquaintances, you will see some you have not seen before for a year.

Peanuts, ginger bread and bologna sausage will be in demand.

Perhaps the pickpocket will be there. Beware of him.

The Centre county picnic is now a full fledged rival to the gathering at Williams Grove, and in time it may excel it.

Now let Ceres and Pomona do their best and then the Grangers can take a rest.

A Model of Beauty and Grandeur.

Gen. D. H. Hastings' remodeled residence is massive and grand in every respect, the more we see of it the better we like it. The colors of the repainted house are rich and tasteful; the surrounding and capacious porch is inviting and with its battlement of bricks and stone is unique and handsome. An appearance of the greatest durability is given by the solid and massive wall of stone surrounding the lawn. The way it is finished also pleases the eye. It carries out the idea of massiveness. Each stone is cut differently in a style of studied carelessness—and it is said that only the most skillful stone-cutters can finish it in this manner, showing that Mr. John Noll and those who assisted him are workmen of great skill. The wall leading down from the house to the gate is to be surmounted with a coping of Hummelston brown stone. The fire brick which has been received is for the gutters. Each brick has its special shape and placed together for the gutter in exact and perfect shade. We could not have imagined any manner of improving this property which could have excelled what we have described in beauty and general good taste.

Business at Curwensville.

The thriving town of Curwensville has been particularly prosperous the past year, several new business industries having been put in operation. The most extensive one was the erection of Hoover, Hughes & Co's new saw mill, which is a stupendous affair, valued at about $300,000. Snyder's new quarries which have been opened are worked to a very large capacity and are behind in filling orders. A match stick factory is a recent enterprise and a fire clay factory is talked of. It is calculated that at least four hundred more men are profitably employed in Curwensville this year than last year. We are glad to learn of its prosperity.

Next Monday in the Schools.

The High School will begin the fall term next Monday and the exercises incident to the occasion will be in accordance with the importance of the event. In the afternoon the county superintendent, Rev. D. M. Wolfe, will be present and will deliver an address to the Senior class.

The friends and patrons of the school are very cordially invited to be present at that time. It is likely that excellent music will also be provided for the occasion and it will surely be very enjoyable.

The Planets This Month.

There will be a very close conjunction of Mars and Saturn on the 20th of September at 2h. 52m. a. m., but at that time the planets will be below our eastern horizon. When they do become visible, a short time before daylight, they appear to the naked eye as one star.

On the 26th of September, 3h. 10m. a. m., Venus will come along and appear within about half a degree of Saturn, but the conjunction will be too near the horizon to be visible here.

—In Portland, Oregon, a boy became entangled in the ropes of a balloon and was dragged up one thousand feet. Wonderful to relate, when the balloon descended the boy was able to extricate himself from the ropes without injury. But don't let this incident encourage any Bellefonte boy to try a similar experiment if there should be a balloon ascension here.

NEWSY NOTES.

Sent to Us by a Skillful Correspondent at Houserville.

Rev. A. A. Black preached a very interesting Harvest Home sermon on Sunday September 8th, his text being from Acts 14th, chapter and 17th, verse—"Nevertheless, He left not himself without a witness in that He did good and gave us rain from Heaven, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness."

The farmers are about through with their seeding.

We're ready for the Granger picnic. The smiling faces of Nellie Houser and Ellie Dale were seen at Rock church on Sunday last.

John Dale, Jr., and Boyd Cowher, are going to Philadelphia to look up their interests there.

The tall form of Ira Lyle was seen at Mrs. Patterson. Ira bought a brand new sun bonnet and a pair of half worn shoes for the sum of 27 cents.

Who bought Patterson's smoke pipe? The writer would like to know, as he (the writer) smokes sometimes himself.

A few of Houserville's fair ladies made two or three bids at a time at the fair recently, in their anxiety to obtain them.

Who stole the preacher's can of peaches at the sale?

We hope now that Ira Bodle has bought a brand new looking glass, that he will have his face clean.

R. H. Houser and William Dale were seen going towards the county capital on Saturday last.

The reason Baird cannot raise a mousetache is because his nose shades his face too much.

Lucy forgot to tie the dog and Grant wasn't able to get there.

D. N. Solt has charge of Snyder's farm at present, Mr. Snyder being in the far west.

Alice she wishes that Bill was of age and then he could put her right into his cage.

Martin Dale, of Morrisville, visited his parents here on Sunday.

Hurrah for W. E. Gray!

Grangers, Read about the Good Yield from Frosted Wheat.

Last spring there was a good deal of discussion about the advisability of sowing frosted wheat. A great many took a strong stand against it, some of the objectors being experienced wheat men. The officers of the Minnesota experimental farm advised the sowing of the frosted wheat. C. H. Goodsell, Superintendent of the Minnesota Northern Line of Elevators, was in Polk county during the seeding. A farmer was sowing frosted wheat so shrunken that it was hardly conceivable that it would grow. He told the farmer he was crazy, and brought a sample of the seed to Minneapolis. He has just received a sample of the product, and it is as fine and plump as was ever grown. Both yield and quality are as good as if from selected seed.

Worked to Make a Talking Machine.

Thomas A. Edison, in a recent talk about his phonograph, said: "For seven months I worked 18 to 20 hours a day upon the single sound 'specia.' I would say to the instrument 'specia,' and it would always say 'pecia,' and I couldn't make it say anything else. It was enough to make me crazy. But I stuck to it until I succeeded, and now you can read a thousand words of newspaper at the rate of 150 words a minute and the instrument will repeat them to you without any omission. You can imagine the difficulty of the task that I accomplished when I tell you that the impressions made upon the cylinder are not more than one-millionth part of an inch in depth, and are completely invisible, even with the aid of a microscope."

A Sharper's Scheme.

A very slick swindler is operating in the southern part of the State. Upon entering a town he lays in a supply of small glasses. These he fills with earth into which he places a couple of short stalks of milk weed or any other plant, with other of roses. He is now prepared to furnish confiding purchasers with shoots from the celebrated "Ceylon Rose" using that or some other high sounding name, at $1.50 each, and does it as fast as he can handle them. Those people who do not subscribe for their local paper are generally the first to get bitten.

—Work is going on actively at the Pennsylvania railroad shops at Altoona. It is probable that the business this fall will be unusually heavy, and that additional cars will be needed. Over 4,000 freight cars have recently been repaired at the shops and 600 new cars been built. President Roberts believes that the rolling stock will soon have to be increased owing to the demand made upon it, and is making preparations to meet the expected emergency. There is a large force of men at Altoona, and the number will be increased as soon as necessary.

An Umbrella Brought Her a Husband.

In the ancient town of Huntingdon, a pretty but true romance was recently enacted. A young lady of that place won a young man for a husband by her thoughtfulness in furnishing him with an umbrella. The young gentleman was passing along the pavement opposite the young lady's residence, during a shower. In the kindness of her heart, she thought of the young man's welfare, called to him, and took him an umbrella, which he accepted with many thanks. The young man began to cogitate upon the act of kindness, and the more he thought about it, the more he became convinced that the young lady who would think so much of his comfort and health as to protect him from the rain, would be the right sort of a lady to propose to, and as usual in the course of true love, he did, was accepted, and the couple are now enjoying the blessing of a happy marriage. By way of caution to young ladies, who may be disposed to try the same device to get a husband, we would state that previous to the umbrella episode the young lady and gentleman were not strangers to each other, but casual acquaintances, and the lady not only got back her umbrella but a husband, too.

It is twenty-seven years ago to-day since the battle bearing that name was fought. After the unveiling of the monument Mr. Musser will visit Shepherdstown, Virginia, and other points of interest, there being many places which are of interest to him as he fought all over that soil.

—Nearly all the newspapers in the State are reporting, day by day, that on the previous night their town was visited by multitudes of white moth that almost obscured the street lights. Now, we don't want the moths, but, nevertheless, will feel delighted if they miss Bellefonte in their nocturnal visits.
